Murray,2009-06-30 It is estimated that approximately 70 percent of patients with chronic daily headaches suffer from drug induced headaches Antibiotics are widely prescribed for ear infections bronchitis and sinusitis and yet in more than 90 percent of cases the drugs are useless Careful review of all the major statin drug studies in subjects without clinical evidence of heart disease shows that there are no significant differences in mortality between people who took cholesterol lowering agents and those who took a placebo. Individuals whose diets include a higher intake of fish oils or who take fish oil supplements can reduce their risk of heart disease or stroke by roughly 47 percent compared to those individuals who do not eat fish or take fish oil supplements. With about 700 000 practicing physicians in the United States it is estimated that the drug industry spends approximately 60 000 in marketing dollars per physician per year. In 1992 the average senior received 19.6 prescriptions per year; in 2005 that number had nearly doubled to 34.4. It is estimated that simply by supplementing the diet with 1 000 to 1 200 mg of calcium and 800 to 1 000 IU of vitamin D more than half of all hip fractures due to osteoporosis might be prevented. Special preparations of peppermint oil have been shown to be more effective than standard drug therapy and have no side effects in relieving all the symptoms of irritable bowel syndrome. Peppermint oil preparations produce dramatic clinical improvement in approximately 70 to 85 percent of cases within a two to four week period.

Book jacket Making Medical Spending Decisions Mark A. Hall, 1997. This book explores the making of health care rationing decisions through the analysis of three alternative decision makers: patients paying out of pocket, officials setting limits on treatments and coverage, and physicians at the bedside. Hall develops this analysis along three dimensions: political, economics, ethics, and law. The economic dimension addresses the practical feasibility of each method. The ethical dimension discusses the moral aspects of these methods while the legal dimension traces the most recent developments in jurisprudence and health law.

Eating Drugs Stefan Ecks, 2013-11-29. A Hindu monk in Calcutta refuses to take his psychotropic medications. His psychiatrist explains that just as his body needs food, the drugs are nutrition for his starved mind. Does it matter how or whether patients understand their prescribed drugs? Millions of people in India are routinely prescribed mood medications. Pharmaceutical companies give doctors strong incentives to write as many prescriptions as possible with as little awkward questioning from patients as possible. Without a sustained public debate on psychopharmaceuticals in India, patients remain puzzled by the notion that drugs can cure disturbances of the mind. While biomedical psychopharmaceuticals are perceived with great suspicion, many non-biomedical treatments are embraced. Stefan Ecks illuminates how biomedical, Ayurvedic, and homeopathic treatments are used in India and argues that pharmaceutical pluralism changes popular ideas of what drugs do. Based on several years of research on pharmaceutical markets, Ecks shows how doctors employ a wide range of strategies to make patients take the remedies prescribed. Yet while metaphors such as mind food may succeed in getting patients to accept the prescriptions, they also obscure a critical awareness of drug effects. This rare ethnography of pharmaceuticals will be of key interest to those in the anthropology and sociology of medicine, pharmacology, mental health, bioethics, global health, and South Asian studies.
