Photodisintegration Of The Deuteron:

The Photodisintegration of the Deuteron with Polarized Photons from LEGS, 1985 Photodisintegration of the Deuteron at High Energy, 1992 Photodisintegration of the Deuteron at Medium and High Energies, 1991

Photodisintegration of the Deuteron H. Arenhövel, M. Sanzone, 2012-12-06 More than 50 years ago in 1934 Chadwick and Goldhaber ChG 34 published a paper entitled A Nuclear Photo effect Disintegration of the Dipion by γ Rays I in the introduction They noted By analogy with the excitation and ionisation of atoms by light one might expect that any complex nucleus should be excited or ionised that is disintegrated by γ rays of suitable energy and furthermore Heavy hydrogen was chosen as the element first to be examined because the dipion has a small mass defect and also because it is the simplest of all nuclear systems and its properties are as important in nuclear theory as the hydrogen is in atomic theory Almost at the same time in 1935 the first theoretical paper on the photodisintegration of the deuteron entitled Quantum theory of the dipion by Bethe and Peierls BeP 35 appeared It is not without significance that these two papers mark the beginning of photonuclear physics in general and emphasize in particular the special role the two body system has played in nuclear physics since then and still plays A steady flow of experimental and theoretical papers on deuteron photodisintegration and its inverse reaction n p capture shows the continuing interest in this fundamental process see fig 1 1 The

Prepost, STANFORD UNIV CALIF HIGH ENERGY PHYSICS LAB., 1969 The differential cross section for the photodisintegration of the deuteron was measured at laboratory photon energies of 222 254 302 342 MeV in CM angle steps of 10 deg between 20 deg CM and 160 deg CM Author Photodisintegration of the Deuteron at 20 MeV Serpil Kucuker, 2010 Photodisintegration of the Deuteron Fredrik Zachariasen, California Institute of

Above 1 GeV., 1988 One of the central issues in nuclear physics is the identification of clear signatures for quarks in nuclei A guiding principle in this search is to perform experiments with high energy electromagnetic probes of the simplest nucleus the deuteron a system which is particularly amenable to theoretical interpretation It has long been known that the quark counting rules seem to apply for electron elastic scattering from the pion and nucleon However the rapid decline in the cross section for electron scattering from the deuteron a six quark system renders an experiment at high momentum transfer unfeasible Clearly the dimensional scaling region is not reached for electron deuteron elastic scattering as indicated This led Brodsky and Chertok to analyze these data in terms of the reduced nuclear amplitudes and produce in effect scaling at a lower momentum transfer Presently this is the only known case where the reduced nuclear amplitude analysis seems to apply

In the present work we abandon elastic electron scattering in favor of an exclusive photoreaction with the deuteron. The simplest process involving a nucleus is the $\gamma d \rightarrow pn$ reaction. Here $n \approx 13$ and an $s \approx 11$ dependence is expected where the quark counting rules are valid. Naively one would expect that the energy region where the quark counting rules are valid to be most naturally described in terms of a quark or parton basis rather than a nucleon basis and thereby provide a signature quark effects in nuclei. Hitherto no $s \approx 11$ dependence has been observed for the data below 1 GeV. As a test of the energy dependence for the $\gamma d \rightarrow pn$ reaction we have performed the first measurements for this process above 1 GeV.

Theory of the Photodisintegration of the Deuteron Leon Donald Pearlstein, 1959 The Photodisintegration of the Deuteron at High Energies Joel Harris Parks, 1959 Photodisintegration of the Deuteron with Polarized Photons from LEGS. , 1985 An experiment is described which will measure the $d \rightarrow \gamma p n$ reaction with polarized photon beams from LEGS ranging in energy from 50 MeV to 530 MeV. The data will yield a new high resolution high statistics determination of the total unpolarized cross section will isolate for the first time the polarization dependent part of the reaction and will measure the photon beam asymmetry with much higher resolution and accuracy than available from existing data. These will provide one of the most stringent tests for models of the nuclear force. In addition high resolution data will be taken with both linear and circularly polarized gamma rays to search for the effects of bibaryons.
