Women and Portraits in Early Modern Europe Andrea Pearson, 2016-12-05 As one of the first books to treat portraits of early modern women as a discrete subject this volume considers the possibilities and limits of agency and identity for women in history and with particular attention to gender as categories of analysis for women's images Its nine original essays on Italy the Low Countries Germany France and England deepen the usefulness of these analytical tools for portraiture Among the book's broad contributions it dispels false assumptions about agency's possibilities and limits showing how agency can be located outside of conventional understanding and conversely how it can be stretched too far It demonstrates that agency is compatible with relational gender analysis especially when alternative agencies such as spectatorship are taken into account It also makes evident the importance of aesthetics for the study of identity and agency The individual essays reveal among other things how portraits broadened the traditional parameters of portraiture explored transvestism and same sex eroticism appropriated aspects of male portraiture to claim those values for their sitters and as sites for gender negotiation resistance and debate invoked considerable relational anxiety Richly layered in method the book offers an array of provocative insights into its subject

Europe's Babylon Michael Pye, 2021-09-07 A revelatory history of Antwerp from its rise to a world city to its fall in the Spanish Fury by the New York Times Notable author of The Edge of the World Before Amsterdam there was a dazzling North Sea port at the hub of the known world the city of Antwerp In the Age of Exploration Antwerp was sensational like nineteenth century Paris or twentieth century New York It was somewhere anything could happen or at least be believed killer bankers easy kisses a market in secrets and every kind of heresy For half the sixteenth century it was the place for breaking rules religious sexual intellectual And it was a place of change a single man cornered all the money in the city and reinvented ideas of what money meant Another gave the city a new shape purely out of his own ambition Jews fleeing the Portuguese Inquisition needed Antwerp for their escape thanks to the remarkable woman at the head of the grandest banking family in Europe Thomas More opened Utopia there Erasmus puzzled over money and exchanges William Tyndale sheltered there and smuggled out his Bible in English until he was killed Pieter Bruegel painted the town as The Tower of Babel But when Antwerp rebelled with the Dutch against the Spanish and lost all that glory was buried and its true history rewritten The city that unsettled so many now became conformist Mutinous troops burned the city records trying to erase its true history In Europe's Babylon Michael Pye sets out to rediscover the city that was lost and bring its wilder days to life using every kind of clue novels paintings songs schoolbooks letters and the archives of Venice London and the Medici He builds a picture of a city haunted by fire plague and violence but one that was learning how to be a power in its own right as it emerged from feudalism An astounding and original narrative that illuminates this glamorous and bloody era of history and reveals how this fascinating city played its role in making the world modern Towards Non-Unidisciplinary Research in European Studies Andreas Moberg, 2025-07-21 This book not only defines what European Studies actually mean but also considers how non unidisciplinary research could be conceptualized in this field As an alternative concept for inter cross trans and multi disciplinary studies non unidisciplinary European Studies as defined in this volume represent a conscious choice to look beyond what is normal From various disciplinary starting points the contributors step out of their discipline giving perspective to pervasive norms and actively incorporating different approaches Through this the volume analyzes the motivations to engage in non unidisciplinarity and develops new methods for European Studies The Present Position of European Politics, Or, Europe in 1887 Dilke, 1887
