

CHAPTER 9

The Restless Earth

Plate tectonics

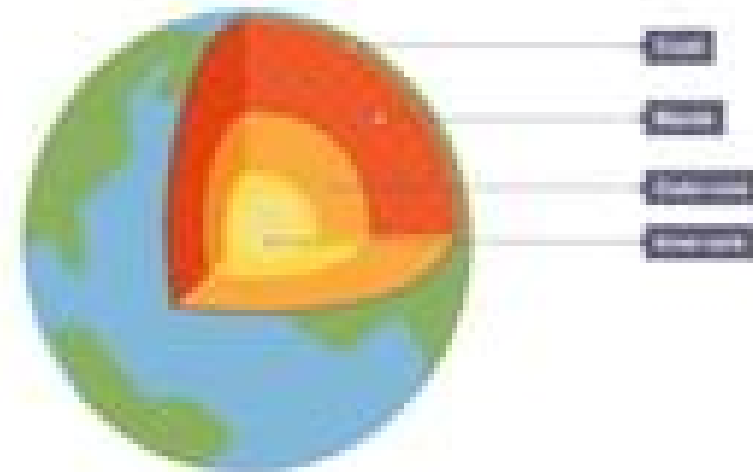

The Earth's plates move in different directions depending on the type of boundary. Learn about the layers of the Earth's crust and plate boundaries.

Structure of the Earth

The Earth is made up of four distinct layers:

- The inner core is in the center and is the hottest part of the Earth. It is solid and made up of iron and nickel with temperatures of up to 5,500°C. With its enormous heat energy, the inner core is like the engine room of the Earth.
- The outer core is the layer surrounding the inner core. It is a liquid layer, also made up of iron and nickel. It is still extremely hot, with temperatures similar to the inner core.
- The mantle is the widest section of the Earth. It has a diameter of approximately 2,900 km. The mantle is made up of semi-molten rock called magma. In the upper parts of the mantle the rock is hard, but lower down the rock is soft and beginning to melt.
- The crust is the outer layer of the earth. It is a thin layer between 5-70 km thick. The crust is the solid rock layer upon which we live.

The diagram below shows the structure of the earth, its geography, taking a slice through a structure to see inside is called a cross section.

The crust and plates

There are two different types of crust: continental crust, which carries land, and oceanic crust, which carries water.

Continental plates are usually quite thick (between 35 to 100 km) compared to the much thinner oceanic plates (between 5 and 10 km).

The oceanic rocks are usually much younger than the continental rocks as new plate material is still being made at these plate boundaries.
