Notes on the Composition of Scientific Papers T. Clifford (Thomas Clifford) Allbutt, 2000 Notes on the Composition of Scientific Papers (Classic Reprint) T. Clifford Allbutt, 2015-07-03 Excerpt from Notes on the Composition of Scientific Papers In the course of the year I peruse sixty or seventy theses for the degree of M B and about twenty five for the degree of M D The matter of these theses is good it is often excellent in composition a few are good but the greater number are written badly some very ill indeed The prevailing defect of their composition is not mere inelegance were it so it were unworthy of educated men it is such as to obscure to perplex and even to travesty the sense itself Thus for the judge who would be just many of the theses are very hard reading and meritorious as in substance they may be as they stand unfit for the printer The use of thesis writing is to train the mind or to prove that the mind has been trained the former purpose is I trust promoted the evidences of the latter are scanty and occasional Thus when the Act is kept we are often forced against our desire to dwell on faults of form to some exclusion of the argument About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Notes on the Composition of Scientific Papers.
