first synchronized sound films of the late 1920s through the end of World War II African American music and dance styles were ubiquitous in films Black performers however were marginalized mostly limited to appearing in specialty acts and various types of short films whereas stardom was reserved for Whites Jumping the Color Line discusses vernacular jazz dance in film as a focal point of American race relations Looking at intersections of race gender and class the book examines how the racialized and gendered body in film performs challenges and negotiates identities and stereotypes Arguing for the transformative and subversive potential of jazz dance performance onscreen the six chapters address a variety of films and performers including many that have received little attention to date Topics include Hollywood's first Black female star Nina Mae McKinney male tap dance class acts in Black cast short films of the early 1930s the film career of Black tap soloist Jeni LeGon the role of dance in the Soundies jukebox shorts of the 1940s cinematic images of the Lindy hop and a series of teen films from the early 1940s that appealed primarily to young White fans of swing culture With a majority of examples taken from marginal film forms such as shorts and B movies the book highlights their role in disseminating alternative images of racial and gender identities as embodied by dancers images that were at least partly at odds with those typically found in major Hollywood productions     The Truth Seeker ,1915     American Florist ,1908
