Reclaiming the Public University Judith Summerfield, Crystal Benedicks, 2007. To reclaim the public university is to focus our energies on teaching all our students well, educating them for a new increasingly complicated age. To deliver on this promise, we must interrogate the general education we provide for our students for that is the vast unrecognized ground we stand on. It is what students and faculty do most in common. If we can get educating our students right generally and liberally, then we will have laid a claim to what the public university needs to be. Children's Book Review Index Gary C. Does the public trust science? Scientists, Scientific organizations. What roles do trust and the lack of trust play in public debates about how science can be used to address such societal concerns as childhood vaccination, cancer screening, and a warming planet? What could happen if social trust in science or scientists faded? These types of questions led the Roundtable on Public Interfaces of the Life Sciences of the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine to convene a 2-day workshop on May 5-6, 2015, on public trust in science. This report explores empirical evidence on public opinion and attitudes toward life sciences as they relate to societal issues, whether and how contentious debate about select life science topics mediates trust, and the roles that scientists, business, media, community groups, and other stakeholders play in creating and maintaining public confidence in life sciences. Does the Public Trust? Science, Trust, and Confidence at the Interfaces of the Life Sciences and Society highlights research on the elements of trust and how to build, mend, or maintain trust and examine best practices in the context of scientist engagement with lay audiences around social issues.
