Hiring and Firing Public Officials Justin Buchler, 2011-04-20 Conventional theories of elections hold that an election is analogous to a consumer product market According to the market paradigm voters are consumers candidates are competing firms and an election is a market in which voters exchange votes for policy by voting for the candidates whose policies they prefer According to this logic a healthy democracy requires frequent competitive elections The market analogy underlies decades of electoral theory but in Hiring and Firing Public Officials Justin Buchler contends that it does not capture the real nature of elections In fact our widespread dissatisfaction with the current state of electoral politics derives from a fundamental misunderstanding of what elections are and what purpose they serve As Justin Buchler shows an election is a mechanism by which voters hire and fire public officials It is not a consumer product market it is a single employment decision Thus the health of democracy depends not on regular competitive elections but on posing a credible threat to fire public officials who do not perform their jobs well However the purpose of that threat is to force public officials to act as faithful public servants so that they do not have to be fired Thus competitive elections by most definitions are indicative of a failure of the democratic system The Parties Respond Louis Sandy Maisel, 2002-08-21 This classic text examines the issues surrounding party politics in the United States The fourth edition considers the demise of the Reform Party in 2000 and discusses campaign finance reform The Japanese Voter Scott C. Richardson, 1991-09-25 This survey of the major factors that influence voting behaviour in Japan demonstrates through a wide range of examples that there are recognizable bases of comparison between Japanese and Western voting behaviour It also produces a number of contrasts with voting in the West The Nationalization of American Political Parties, 1880-1896 Daniel Klinghard, 2010-04-19 This book investigates the creation of the first truly nationalized party organizations in the United States in the late nineteenth century an innovation that reversed the parties traditional privileging of state and local interests in nominating campaigns and the conduct of national campaigns Between 1880 and 1896 party elites crafted a defense of these national organizations that charted the theoretical parameters of American party development into the twentieth century With empowered national committees and a new understanding of the parties role in the political system national party leaders dominated American politics in new ways renewed the parties legitimacy in an increasingly pluralistic and nationalized political environment and thus maintained their relevance throughout the twentieth century The new organizations particularly served the interests of presidents and presidential candidates and the little studied presidencies of the late nineteenth century demonstrate the first stirrings of modern presidential party leadership Irish Voters Decide Richard Sinnott, 1995 This textbook explores voting behaviour in Irish general elections and referendums since independence in 1922 By interpreting the latest survey opinion poll and statistical data for the non psephologist Richard Sinnott explores how and why Irish voters preferences have changed and asks whether the 1922 general election has heralded a fundamental realignment in the Irish political system
