The Category of the Person Michael Carrithers, Steven Collins, Steven Lukes, 1985-12-27 The concept that people have of themselves as a person is one of the most intimate notions that they hold Yet the way in which the category of the person is conceived varies over time and space In this volume anthropologists philosophers and historians examine the notion of the person in different cultures past and present Taking as their starting point a lecture on the person as a category of the human mind given by Marcel Mauss in 1938 the contributors critically assess Mauss s speculation that notions of the person rather than being primarily philosophical or psychological have a complex social and ideological origin Discussing societies ranging from ancient Greece India and China to modern Africa and Papua New Guinea they provide fascinating descriptions of how these different cultures define the person But they also raise deeper theoretical issues What is universally constant and what is culturally variable in people's thinking about the person How can these variations be explained Has there been a general progressive development toward the modern Western view of the person What is distinctive about this How do one's notions of the person inform one's ability to comprehend alternative formulations These questions are of compelling interest for a wide range of anthropologists philosophers historians psychologists sociologists orientalists and classicists The book will appeal to any reader concerned with understanding one of the most fundamental aspects of human existence Knowledge for Whom?
