

Polarographic Maxima

- ❖ An increase of current above the limiting value in the form of a maximum is often noticed on polarographic waves known as polarographic maxima.
- ❖ The origin of the maximum is sometimes connected with the mechanism of the electrode process as in the case of catalytic discharge of ions, while in many cases, it is caused by the increased transport of the depolarizer towards the electrode by a streaming motion of the solution.
- ❖ The presence of this reproducible polarographic maxima leads to error in determining half wave potential and diffusion current.
