Marikana Julian Brown, 2022 In August 2012 the South African police at the encouragement of mining capital and with the support of the political state intervened to end a week long strike at the Lonmin platinum mine in Marikana in South Africa's North West Province On the afternoon of Thursday 16 August they police shot and killed 34 men Hundreds more were injured some shot as they fled None posed a threat to any police officer Recognised by many as an event of international significance in stories of global politics and labour relations the perspectives of the miners has however been almost missing from published accounts This book for the first time brings into focus the men's lives and deaths telling the stories of those who embarked on the strike those who were killed and of the family members who have survived to fight for the memories of their loved ones It places the strike in the context of South Africa's long history of racial and economic exclusion explaining how the miners came to be in Marikana how their lives were ordinarily lived and the substance of their complaints It shows how the strike developed from an initial gathering into a mass movement of more than 3 000 workers It discusses the violence of the strike and explores the political context of the state's response and the eagerness of the police to collaborate in suppressing the strike Recounting the events of the massacre in unprecedented detail the book sets out how each miner died and everything we know about the police operation Finally Brown traces the aftermath the attempts of the families of the deceased to identify and bury their dead and then the state's attempts to spin a narrative that placed all blame on the miners the subsequent Commission of Inquiry and its failure to resolve any real issues and the solidarity politics that have emerged since

Arresting Cinema Karen Fang, 2017-01-11 When Ridley Scott envisioned Blade Runner's set as Hong Kong on a bad day he nodded to the city's overcrowding as well as its widespread use of surveillance But while Scott brought Hong Kong and surveillance into the global film repertoire the city's own cinema has remained outside of the global surveillance discussion In Arresting Cinema Karen Fang delivers a unifying account of Hong Kong cinema that draws upon its renowned crime films and other unique genres to demonstrate Hong Kong's view of surveillance She argues that Hong Kong's films display a tolerance of and even opportunism towards the soft cage of constant observation unlike the fearful view prevalent in the West However many surveillance cinema studies focus solely on European and Hollywood films discounting other artistic traditions and industrial circumstances Hong Kong's films show a more crowded increasingly economically stratified and postnational world that nevertheless offers an aura of hopeful futurity Only by exploring Hong Kong surveillance film can we begin to shape a truly global understanding of Hitchcock's rear window ethics
