Abstract: One of the issues facing the field of political behaviour analysis in recent years has been the transformation of political participation among citizens, in a context of increasing change, profoundly marked by the spread of a new digital paradigm. Network society has brought with it new forms of political participation, where different types of participatory citizenship coexist in a process of increasing interaction which, in turn, creates new morphologies, and where online and offline modes are reciprocal, generating new patterns of behaviour. Of these different types of participatory citizenship, that of the disaffected is perhaps among the most important in recent years and, in particular, since the start of the so-called “Great Recession” around 2008, and the subsequent global COVID-19 crisis. This recent context can be characterised by a significant increase in political disaffection, resulting from a loss of trust in institutions and from the constant distancing of a certain section of the citizenry from politics as a coded punishment of those governments and institutions they see as ineffective. This paper provides an analysis of citizenship types in Latin America, particularly that of the disaffected, describing their relationship to the following of political information through digital media and social networks, and identifying patterns of evolution and development in some of the trends. Results show that a clear distinction exists between the different types of citizenship and associated forms of participation, both online and offline, while also describing differences in both political perceptions and attitudes, and between areas or regions in Latin America. Likewise, important differences are found according to citizen type in relation to the following of different social networks, especially among citizens categorised as critical or disaffected.

1. Introduction

Today, the political and electoral behaviour of citizens, a subject of significant interest and ongoing study within political science, finds, in the new forms of participation enabled by the internet, and in the increase in political disaffection, two more factors to add to the existing mix of possible explanatory elements.

In relation to the former, social networks and Web 2.0 play an increasing role in citizen interconnection, social mobilisation, and political participation; they are an unstoppable force with an identity of their own which have, with their advantages and disadvantages, been instrumental in assisting and boosting democratic participation and the design and implementation of citizen initiatives [1].

In the new information and communication society, new means of communication between politicians and citizens have opened up, which are faster and more direct than more traditional means [2]. These new tools, which support citizen commitment to civic activities and political involvement [3], play an increasingly central role in the communication practices and political mobilisation of governments, political parties, and social movements [4–6].

The Epic of Latin America John A. Crow, 1980 Uniquely comprehensive and comparative praised for its devotion to social and cultural developments as well as politics and economics this book has been revised and brought up to date with chapters on the great upheavals of the 1980s Political Culture and Foreign Policy in Latin America Roland H. Ebel, Raymond C. Taras, James D. Cochrane, 1991-09-27 This book explores the impact of Latin America's political culture on the international politics of the region It offers a general account of traditional Iberian political culture while examining how relations among states in the hemisphere where the United States has been the central actor have evolved over time The authors assess the degree of consistency between domestic and international political behavior The assessments are supported by case studies Brazil, a Country Study United States. Department of the Army, 1983 General study of Brazil covers history demographic aspects and geographical aspects ethnic groups social structure social change religious practice education health the economy economic policies industrial sector agricultural sector banking system monetary policies trade government politics political parties international relations military service defence administration of justice Bibliography glossary maps organigram photographs statistical tables The Logic of Multiparty Systems M.J. Holler, 2012-12-06 What determines the number of political parties in a democracy Electoral rules certainly influence the incentives to create and maintain parties However a society's political culture can maintain parties despite electoral rules that give them poor prospects of success Thus comparing the number of parties and differences in electoral rules across countries cannot clearly test the effect of the electoral rules A better test would examine a society with a fairly continuous political culture but a change in electoral rules Postwar France is such a society While the basic social order has not changed there was a drastic change in the electoral system in 1958 which theory implies would reduce the number of parties Thus we can test the hypothesis that the number of parties fell with the change in electoral system We can also calculate an equivalent number of parties to see how closely France approached a two party system under the new regime The first section describes the electoral rules under the Fourth and Fifth Republics The second section develops a model that indicates how the change in electoral rules should have affected the incentives for multiple parties The third section tests the hypothesis that the number of parties fell from the Fourth to the Fifth Republic 1 Electoral Rules In the French Fourth Republic 1945 1958 political parties existed largely to serve the direct interests of their members

Political Violence, Crises and Revolutions (Routledge Revivals) Ekkart Zimmermann, 2013-04-15 First published in 1983 this extraordinary study provides a comprehensive systematic evaluation of cross national theorizing and quantitative empirical evidence on four interrelated phenomena Political violence Crises Military Coups D tat Revolutions Findings from social psychological research on aggression are integrated in this outstanding study as well as results reported in social historical studies of revolution The focus of the book is always on analytical perspectives and corresponding empirical evidence The author continually highlights the sociostructural and political conditions of political violence crises and revolutions This exceptionally detailed and systematic inventory of theories and research on a classic triad of political science political violence crises and revolutions also includes a remarkable bibliography encompassing over 3000 items

Latin American Political Culture John A. Booth, Patricia Bayer Richard, 2014-10-30 Latin American Political Culture Public Opinion and Democracy presents a genuinely pan Latin American examination of the region s contemporary political culture This is the only book to extensively investigate the attitudes and behaviors of Latin Americans based on the Latin American Public Opinion Project s LAPOP AmericasBarometer surveys The findings reveal a complex Latin America with distinct political culture Authors John Booth and Patricia Bayer Richard join rigorous analysis with clear graphic presentation and extensive examples and readers learn about public opinion research engage with further questions for analysis and have access to data an expansive bibliography and links to appendices

The Politics of Population in Brazil Peter McDonough, Amaury DeSouza, 2014-08-27 The population of Brazil increased tenfold from 10 to over 100 million between 1880 and 1980 nearly half of this increase occurring since the end of World War II The Politics of Population in Brazil examines the attitudes toward population planning of Brazilian government officials and other elites bishops politicians labor leaders and business owners in comparison with mass public opinion The authors findings that elites seriously underestimate the desire for family planning services while the public views birth control as a basic issue represent an important contribution on a timely issue A major reason for this disparity is that the elites tend to define the issue as a matter of national power and collective growth and the public sees it as a bread and butter question affecting the daily lives of families McDonough and DeSouza document not only the real gulf between elite and mass opinion but also the propensity of the elites to exaggerate this gap through their stereotyping of public opinion as conservative and disinterested in family planning Despite these differences the authors demonstrate that population planning is less conflict ridden than many other controversies in Brazilian politics and probably more amenable to piecemeal bargaining than some earlier studies suggest In part this is because attitudes on the issue are not closely identified with opinions regarding left versus right disputes In addition for the public in general religious sentiment affects attitudes toward family planning only indirectly This separation which reflects the historical lack of penetration of Brazilian society on the part of the church further attenuates the issue s potential for galvanizing deep seated antagonisms As the authors note this situation stands in contrast to the fierce debates that moral issues have generated in Spain and Ireland The study is noteworthy not only for its original approach the incorporation of mass and elite data and the departure from the standard concerns with fertility determinants in population but also for its sophisticated methodology and lucid presentation

Community Participation in Health Lynn M. Lynn Marie Morgan, 1987 Reorganizing Popular Politics Ruth Berins Collier, Samuel Handlin, 2015-10-29 A historic shift has occurred in the organizational structures through which the lower classes in Latin America express voice and find political representation. With the political and economic reforms of the 1980s and 1990s, networks of community based associations and nongovernmental organizations replaced party affiliated labor unions as the predominant organizations to which the lower classes turned. This volume examines the new interest regime in Argentina, Chile, Peru, and Venezuela through two extensive surveys: one of individuals and one of associations undertaken in those nations' capital cities. Contrary to common perceptions, the new interest regime is neither a vibrant autonomous civil society nor a set of weak atomized organizations. Participation in associations is generally high compared to direct action as a strategy for pursuing collective interests, and associations more frequently coordinate and engage the state than has sometimes been assumed. However, various forms of interaction with the state pose a classic trade off between representation and state control, and the new interest regime is marked by representational distortion in that the lower classes are less likely to use the new structures than the middle classes. Within these general patterns, distinct national models are emerging. This volume represents the most ambitious and systematic effort to date to examine individual participation and associational life in Latin America and to carry out a cross national analysis of new forms of political representation.
