Rules of Thumb for Evaluating Preferential Trading Arrangements

Glenn W. Harrison, 2016 Most interesting results on the welfare effects of regional arrangements are ambiguous at a theoretical level Many questions only have quantitative answers that are specific to the particular structural features of the economy and the policy considered So to determine the impact of prospective regional arrangements governments often rely on a quantitative evaluation Usually at the request of client governments of the World Bank the authors have implemented many computable general equilibrium CGE models to inform policymakers The authors summarize the main conclusions drawn from these studies The principal conclusions are Countries excluded from a preferential trade arrangement almost always lose Market access is a key determinant of the net benefits of a preferential trade arrangement With a free trade agreement FTA the external tariff can be lowered such that a poor FTA becomes attractive For Southern countries North South agreements offer a beneficial increase in competition in their home markets and involve little increase in the supply price of Northern country sales in Southern countries Multilateral trade liberalization results in significantly larger gains to the world than the network of regional arrangements For individual countries without high protection quot additive regionalismquot will likely result in substantially larger gains than unilateral trade liberalization Tax replacement requirements reduce the set of desirable regional arrangements Trade taxes are often an inefficient source of tax revenue Trade liberalization should be expected to be pro poor in developing countries but results will be diverse at the household level so safety nets are important Dynamic effects to reverse conclusions regarding regionalism are not expected This paper a product of Trade Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to assess the impact of regional trade integration on growth and poverty

Chand, Institute of Economic Growth (India), 2004 Returns to Regionalism Raquel Fernandez (Ph.D.), 1997 The last decade has witnessed an explosion in the number of regional trade agreements RTAs There seems to be a general if ill defined belief on the part of many policy makers and among a number of academics as well that there is more to a RTA than the traditional gains from trade This paper examines several possible benefits that RTAs may confer to their partners including credibility signaling bargaining power insurance and coordination It assesses the necessary conditions for each of these candidates to work gives stylized examples of specific types of policy where it might be applicable examines real cases where the explanation might be relevant and discusses their overall plausibility It concludes by examining NAFTA and the Europe Agreements viewed in this light The New Regionalism and Policy Interdependence Leonardo Baccini,Andreas Dür,2012

Since 1990 the number of preferential trade agreements has increased rapidly Our argument explains this phenomenon known as the new regionalism as a result of competition for market access Exporters that face trade diversion because of their exclusion from a preferential trade agreement concluded by foreign countries push their governments into signing an agreement with the country in which their exports are threatened We test our argument in a quantitative analysis of the proliferation of preferential trade agreements among 167 countries between 1990 and 2007 The finding that competition for market access is a major driving force of the new regionalism is a contribution to the literature on regionalism and to broader debates about global economic regulation Regional Integration and the Global Trading System Kym Anderson,1993
