Lin,2016-01-04 Since the New Testament's inception as written text its manuscripts have been subject to all the dangers of history: scribal error, emendation, injury and total destruction. The traditional goal of modern textual criticism has been to reconstruct an original text from surviving manuscripts, adjudicating among all the variant texts resulting from the slips, additions and embellishments of scribal hand copying. Because of the way manuscripts circulate and give rise to new copies, it can be said that they have an erotic life: they mate and breed, bear offspring and generate families and descendants. New Testament textual critics of the eighteenth century who began to use this language to group texts into families and genealogies were not pioneering new approaches but rather borrowing the metaphors and methods of natural scientists. Texts began to be classified into families, tribes and nations and later were racialized as African or Asian with distinguishable textual physiognomies and textual complexions. The Erotic Life of Manuscripts explores this curious relationship between the field of New Testament textual criticism and the biological sciences, beginning with the eighteenth century and extending into the present. While these biological metaphors have been powerful tools for textual critics, they also produce problematic understandings of textual purity and agency with the use of scientific discourse, artificially separating the work of textual criticism from literary interpretation. Yijian Lin shows how the use of biological classification, genealogy, evolutionary theory and phylogenetics has shaped and limited the goals of New Testament textual criticism, the greatest of which is the establishment of an authoritative original text. She concludes by proposing new metaphors for the field. Sexuality and Eroticism in a Post-pandemic World, 2023-09-20 The cultural change denominated as the new normal goes far beyond the adaptation to habits like physical distancing, limited person-to-person contact, teleworking and self-isolation established with the COVID-19 pandemic. A series of significant transformations in human behavior spreads today in societies all around the world: physical intimacy decreases while virtual reality expands and alterity declines while artificial intelligence emerges, leading to structural reconfigurations of sex relationships, gender awareness and subjectivity. Sexuality and Eroticism in a Post-pandemic World explores this new cultural atmosphere through twelve interdisciplinary essays questioning global governmentality and challenging the biopolitics of the new normal: the administration of self-control, societies so politically correct that repressed desire for otherness only finds a simulation of its satisfaction with the forced abnormality, outrageousness and violence of mainstream porn going from ars erotica to alternative pornography, from online dating to gender fluidity, from LGBTQI activism to sex life cultivation and more.
