

Relational Epistemologies for a Living Planet

How do we go about arriving at “truths”, together? Not “timeless” truths, but useful truths, situated ones, something that helps this group, this organization, this community, find its own way forward? As a practitioner of group facilitation, I have developed certain practical knowledge about this; as a theorist and researcher-in-training, I have begun to explore long-standing questions about how our conventional cognitive habits might create difficulties for this work. In this essay, I will be exploring a variety of academic theorists who question our ingrained cultural assumptions about argumentation, while also pointing to some useful alternatives.

Forty years ago, in Metaphors We Live By, cognitive linguist George Lakoff and philosopher Mark Johnson invited us to become more conscious of our cultural patterns by observing how arguments, one aspect of our society’s search for truth, are organized through the metaphor of “war” (he “attacked” my position, she “defended” her thesis):

ARGUMENT is partially structured, understood, performed, and talked about in terms of WAR. [...] The language of argument is not poetic, fanciful, or rhetorical; it is literal. We talk about arguments that way because we conceive of them that way – and we act according to the way we conceive things. (1980, p. 5)<sup>1</sup>

Lakoff and Johnson point out that even “rational argument”, the specialized subset of argument that prevails in the worlds of academia, law, and diplomacy, is still structured by war. Ostensibly restricted to stating premises, citing evidence, and drawing logical conclusions, “there is still a position to be established and defended, you can win or lose, you have an opponent whose position you attack and destroy and whose argument you try to shoot down” (p. 64). Their examples show how there is often present, in a subtle form, “the ‘irrational’ and ‘unfair’ tactics that rational arguments in their ideal form are supposed to transcend” (p. 65).

On the whole, academic culture as a whole still lacks a coherent alternative to the culture of argumentation. Here is the experience of AnaLouise Keating, multicultural women’s and gender studies professor:

<sup>1</sup> Lakoff and Johnson’s work on the metaphorical foundations of language was part of their invitation to move beyond the “myth of objectivism” and the “myth of subjectivism” to “the experientialist alternative” where “understanding emerges from interaction” (1980, p. 230).
