

Māori Creation Story

In the beginning of time there was nothing on earth, not a day, just Te Pō, darkness. In the Te Pō there were three beings: Hāpapa the sky father and Papatūmākorua the earth mother who were to be. They lay together in a tight embrace. Together, they had many children who were all male. The sons lived below them in the darkness.

These sons were not in the past and have magical powers. They created these things about the creation of the universe and the origins of gods and of man. Natural events, the weather, the stars and the moon, the fish, and the birds are all found in these myths.

As the children grew up, they wondered what it would be like to live in the light. Tāwhiri-mātea, the fastest of all the sons, decided to be the leader. "Let's all leave!" The brothers disagreed. Tāwhiri-mātea, the god of the forests and birds, had a solution to the problem. "We will push them apart. Hāpapa will be in the sky above us and Papatūmākorua will stay below us in the darkness then."

He was the weather and he was the sky. They were not to be separated. Please don't bring him back, and don't bring him back.

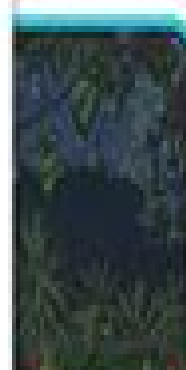

He was the weather and he was the sky. They were not to be separated. Please don't bring him back, and don't bring him back.

He was the weather and he was the sky. They were not to be separated. Please don't bring him back, and don't bring him back.

He was the weather and he was the sky. They were not to be separated. Please don't bring him back, and don't bring him back.

He was the weather and he was the sky. They were not to be separated. Please don't bring him back, and don't bring him back.
