attempted to argue with him He was given to long walks and to collecting insects or flowers He could never be persuaded to make one of the cricket eleven but in winter when there was little scope for his favourite pursuit he threw himself into football and although he absolutely refused to accept the captaincy when unanimously elected to that honour he was considered by far the most valuable member of the team He was scarcely popular among the boys of his own age for although his fun and general good temper were appreciated by them his determination to go his own way and his entire disregard for the opinion of others caused him to be considered an unsociable sort of fellow an impression increased by the fact that he had no particular chums
