

Asia

Getting Started

Display the map. Explain to students that Asia is the largest and most populous continent. Point out that Asia and Europe actually form one landmass called Eurasia but that they are usually considered separate continents. Encourage students to take a brief "tour" of Asia by saying what they know about different countries on the continent. Point out that the highest mountain (Everest) and the largest lake (the Caspian Sea, which is salt water) are located in Asia.

Teaching With the Map

Explain to students that Asia has tremendous geographic and cultural variety. Ask a volunteer to come up and locate Japan on the map. Then ask another volunteer to locate Saudi Arabia. Ask another student to find India. Invite students to share what they know about these three countries and how they are alike and different. Discuss the people, language, food, culture, and so on.

Divide the class into six groups and assign each group one of the regions of Asia—South Asia, Southwest Asia (part of the Middle East), Southeast Asia, East Asia, North Asia (Siberia, Russia), and Central Asia. Have each group list the countries in their region, then pick one country on which to report. Have them include interesting facts about the country, its people, and/or its region.

To Do

- ◆ Photocopy and distribute "Asian Population" (pages 2–3) to each student. Explain that they will color-code the countries in Asia based on their population. You may want to display the outline map on page 3 and do the activity as a whole class.
- ◆ Is there a connection between the size of a country's population and the size of its economy? To find out, photocopy and distribute "Economies of Asia" (page 4) as well as the Asia outline map (page 3). Explain to students that they will be creating another color-coded map, but instead of showing population information, this map will show economic information about some Asian countries. Remind students that GNP, which stands for Gross National Product, is the total value of goods and services produced by a country. You may wish to go over "billion" and "trillion" with students to be sure they understand the magnitude of these numbers. After they have completed the reproducible, have students compare it with the population map, and discuss the connection between population and economy.
