

Public Policy Analysis

Ebenezer O. Oso

Introduction

THE experiences of American political scientists after the Second World War have called into question the historical and descriptive method of studying and analysing politics and political issues, and brought into the fore the utility of an alternative approach. The decision-making approach to the study of politics, which grew after the war, thus expanded the scope of the study of politics and shifted attention from the focus on government and political institutions to emphasise on the decision-making processes which shape the behaviour of government and political institutions. This, therefore, popularised the study of public policy analysis as a distinct field in political science.

What is intended in this chapter is to provide an understanding to the study of public policy by answering the following pertinent questions: What is public policy? What is the utility of analysis in understanding the subject matter of public policy? How are policy decisions made and in whose interest? Who are the actors in the policy decision processes? These important questions constitute the fulcrum of the nature, scope and processes of public policy making. They are also instructive in an attempt to answer the classical question of politics: "who gets what, when and how" (Lasswell, 1936).

Politics, Administration and Public Policy

From the foregoing comments, we could establish a persuasive interconnection among the subject matters of politics, public administration and public policy. Politics, we should note, concerns itself with what David Easton calls the authoritative allocation of values in a political system. Values, to Sambo (1999: 281), are the things people desire and pursue with a fair amount of intensity. Values represent the aggregate interests and pursuits of individuals and groups of individuals which define the reason of their existence in the society. Notably, values vary from one individual or group to another. What becomes an issue is the scarcity of resources to meet the various conflicting desires and interests of individuals and groups in the society which shifts the burden of allocation to politics, simply represented by government or what Easton also calls authority. The outcome of a legitimate political process could be referred to as public policy. The cumulative judgmental decision made by the authority in allocating values, which of course may be favourable to some and unfavourable to others, is what Sambo conceives as public policy (1999: 282). The conflicts arising from the processes are also resolved through the mechanism of politics.

In the same vein, public administration ensures the implementation of the values allocated. This includes ensuring that such wealth, rights and duties are distributed to individuals and groups in the society. It is imperative, therefore, to make decisions concerning strategies,

Human Services Bibliography Series, 1977-11 Social Policy and Administration Revisited David Donnison, Valerie Chapman, Michael Meacher, Angela Sears, Kenneth Urwin, 2021-11-07 Originally published in 1965 this standard work sets out to explore the questions What is social administration and how can people prepare themselves for this work It shows the social services in continuous evolution in response to political economic and social change and it ends with a deeply thoughtful and thought provoking analysis of the processes and causes of this evolution and of the different contributions to change made by the various parties concerned This analysis is based on the case studies presented in the book s central chapters Of this new version of the book first published in 1975 Professor Donnison wrote The first three chapters of the original book have been scrapped and a new introduction to the whole subject takes their place an introduction not only to the literature about social policy and administration but to the point and purpose of the subject for students who rightly expect to be convinced about this before devoting their time to it Then follow eight case studies of innovations in the work and policies of local units of the social services including housing education a home help service planning and legal aid besides social work services These are the original studies untouched I have returned to each agency and found out what has happened since our original studies adding a postscript to each outlining the main developments since the original research ten to twenty years ago I don t think anyone has ever done that before In most cases the innovating trends we identified have gone further often becoming national orthodoxy by now The one on legal aid where unexpected developments have occurred is at least as interesting Professor Donnison has added a ninth case study of the Department of Social Administration at the London School of Economics where he was working when the original studies were made Professor Richard Titmuss was head of the department at that time This study traces the development of education for social workers at a seminal stage and the difficult problems which had to be resolved when major new departures occurred in this field The chapter will be of lasting interest to historians of social work and social work education in Britain besides throwing light on the process of innovation in social policy
