Managing Political Change Irene L. Gendzier, 2019-03-04 For nearly three decades policymakers and students have been concerned with Third World societies in transition. Conventional interpretations of political change formalized in studies of political development have dominated approaches to analyzing such changes. Yet argues the author these interpretations have been justly criticized as bankrupt and irrelevant to Third World realities. Why are they reproduced? How can one explain the belief that these approaches remain viable? These are some of the questions addressed in this wideranging review of the literature of political development and the paradigms that have guided analysis of political change over the past thirty years. Examining how political development theories are rooted in U S foreign policy domestic political trends and changes in postwar political science Dr Gendzier grounds the traditional approach to political development in recent history and politics. Her analysis raises questions about how development doctrine is related to foreign policy as well as noting development theory s debt to cold war ideology and revisionist theories of liberal democracy. Dr Gendzier s interpretation sheds light on the reasons for the current theoretical bias that favors approaching politics in terms of psychology and culture an approach that she states has had devastating effects on our understanding of politics.

Trade and Industrial Development in Africa Moyo, Theresa, 2015-03-02 This book revisits the perennial challenge that scholars economists and politicians have been grappling with since the 1960s. Development in this book has been defined in a context that projects it as a multidimensional and complex process which seeks to enhance the human social economic and cultural welfare of the people. This book calls for a rethinking of trade and industry for Africa s development. It uses data drawn from national development plans and strategies and trade and industry issues have been prioritized at the continental level in key policy documents. On the whole Africa s industry and trade performance have been poor in spite of national regional and continental plans. The contributors to this volume propose some alternative strategies and policies which are necessary for trade and industry to grow and to contribute to the well being of Africa's people. It calls for a developmental trade and industry policy which fundamentally must be people-centred. African states should invest time, energy and resources to develop policies which will take into consideration African realities. The different contributors are aware that Africa has experienced strong economic growth in the recent past but this growth has largely been due to a strong demand for Africa's primary commodity exports. It has also been a result of increases in productivity and domestic investment and remittances from Africans living in the Diaspora. It is important to note that despite this unprecedented growth performance, the impact of trade and industry on development has been limited. The book argues that a structural transformation of Africa's economies is inevitable if Africa is to achieve the shift from the dominant paradigm of production and export of primary goods. The various contributors to this book agree that there is a need to rethink policy and strategy in order to achieve industrial development in Africa. There is no unique solution or answer that can fit all situations as African countries are not the same. While Africa can draw lessons from other regions which have successfully industrialized, this book argues that policies and strategies will have to be adapted to country-specific situations and circumstances.

Foreign Intervention And China's Industrial Development, 1870-1911 Stephen C Thomas, 2019-03-04 More than one hundred years ago, imperial Chinese leaders tried to industrialize their nation much as China's leaders are attempting today. Self-strengthening projects in industry and the military were implemented to increase China's wealth and power and to protect the country from further colonization by the Western powers of the nineteenth century.

A Comparative Political Economy of Industrial Capitalism R. Mascarenhas, 2002-10-04 This comparative study of industrial capitalism is an examination of state-economy relations in mixed economies ranging from the interventionist German and Japanese to the less interventionist Anglo-American. Following the postwar consensus that resulted in the golden age 1950-1973 and ended with the energy crisis, the Anglo-American economies adopted neoliberalism while Germany and Japan remained interventionist. This resulted in the emergence of national types of capitalism. While analyzing the increased competition between them, R. C. Mascarenhas also notes the influence of globalization as well as alternative capitalism with the survival and re-emergence of industrial districts.

Stages of Industrial Development in Asia Sung Jae Koh, 2016-11-11 This volume is a major contribution to fuller understanding of the modern economic and industrial history of Asian nations and to the general understanding of the socioeconomic conditions in underdeveloped countries, stressing the history of the modernization of the cotton industry not merely because of its basic importance but also because such limitation gives definiteness to the subject. The author analyzes all the factors that have changed the tempo, altered the direction and limited the extent of the industrial development in these countries, with special references to the economic implication of actions by social organizations and political institutions. The volume contains a wealth of detailed statistical matter in which the reader will find systematically the main factual contexts of the industrial development of each country. Sung Jae Koh's service to English readers is therefore an important one in a field where there is an acknowledged growing need for such information. Sung Jae Koh held professorships at Yonsei University and Seoul National University He was also a visiting scholar at the University of Pennsylvania
