Blutstein, 1977 Manual descriptivo de la Republica de Colombia      A Diasporan Mormon's Life Robert S. Jordan, 2009-02-05 Offering a glimpse into the lives of upwardly mobile Mormon professionals this series of personal essays by author Dr Robert S Jordan describes his odyssey as a third generation Mormon of polygamous descent whose family ascended from rural pioneer poverty to upper middle class social and economic success A Diasporan Mormons Life chronicles the life of Jordan a child of the Mormon Diasporans who left the social and cultural isolation of Utah for a more secular modern America This memoir describes his struggle to find his personal identity from the tensions created between his religious heritage and his secular upbringing Jordans life is remarkably varied He studied at East Coast and California high schools state universities such as UCLA and the University of Utah and institutions such as Princeton and Oxford He witnessed World War II the Korean War the Cold War Vietnam and survived Hurricane Katrina He lived in large urban centers and locations on the global periphery He engaged in academic research and teaching university administration and government service A searching informative and entertaining memoir enhanced with numerous photos this memoir distills and clarifies the experiences of his generation and contributes to the history and sociology of twentieth century Mormonism      The European Voter Jacques Thomassen, 2005-07-28 This book provides a systematic comparative analysis of how and why voting behaviour has changed in Europe in recent decades It has been widely argued that radical changes have occurred in the how and why of voting behaviour in Europe as a result of changes in the structure of society most notably the rise in material affluence and educational attainment and the decline in religious observance and the size of the working class But most tests of this proposition have been undertaken on single countries This book however systematically tests the validity of this proposition across various European countries The argument that social change has altered voting behaviour has been increasingly challenged on the grounds that it takes too little account of changes in the choices that are put before voters by the parties such as the promises and proposals that are put forward at election time This book therefore also assesses the relative explanatory power of claims that voting behaviour has changed because of changes in society against claims that it responds to changes in the offerings of political parties And it is clear from the analyses reported in this book that contrary to the claims of much of the extant literature the latter argument appears better able to account for many of the patterns and changes in European voting behaviour and thus the book constitutes an important challenge to much current academic orthodoxy This is the first book to provide a systematic comparison of the long term dynamics of the voting behaviour of individual voters across such a wide range of European countries taking into account the dynamics of the choices put before voters by the parties and for the first time relating this to the way voters behave Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary issues in comparative government and politics The General Editors are Max Kaase Professor of Political Science Vice President and Dean School of Humanities and Social Science International University Bremen and Kenneth Newton Professor of Comparative Politics University of Southampton The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research Africa Air University (U.S.). Pennsylvania Union List of Serials ,1984 Political Participation and Government Regulation Sam Peltzman,1998-11-15 Sam Peltzman is one of the world s leading economists and the essays in this collection are central to the modern canon in political economy These ten articles and an original introduction respond to two broad questions How does government work How do voters and their elected representatives make decisions Given the media s portrayal of the cynical political atmosphere in America Peltzman s responses are rather surprising the electorate really does make well informed decisions and elected officials actually do tend to vote according to their constituents interests These conclusions bear the stamp of the Chicago approach to political economy which applies microeconomic principles to political phenomena an approach that has had considerable success explaining why certain government policies have not achieved their intended effects This collection reflects Peltzman s long career studying the interface between the private economy and the public sector It will be essential to anyone who wishes to study government activity and voting behavior from an economic perspective

The Motherless State Eileen McDonagh, 2009-08-01 American women attain more professional success than most of their counterparts around the world but they lag surprisingly far behind in the national political arena Women held only 15 percent of U S congressional seats in 2006 a proportion that ranks America behind eighty two other countries in terms of females elected to legislative office A compelling exploration of this deficiency The Motherless State reveals why the United States differs from comparable democracies that routinely elect far more women to their national governing bodies and chief executive positions Explaining that equal rights alone do not ensure equal access to political office Eileen McDonagh shows that electoral gender parity also requires public policies that represent maternal traits Most other democracies she demonstrates view women as more suited to govern because their governments have taken on maternal roles through social welfare provisions gender quotas or the continuance of symbolic hereditary monarchies The United States has not adopted such policies and until it does McDonagh insightfully warns American women run for office with a troubling disadvantage
