Cultural Centrality and Political Change in Chinese History Roger V. Des Forges, 2003 The Ming period of Chinese history is often depicted as one of cultural aridity political despotism and social stasis Recent studies have shown that the arts continued to flourish government remained effective people enjoyed considerable mobility and China served as a center of the global economy This study goes further to argue that China's perennial quest for cultural centrality resulted in periodic political changes that permitted the Chinese people to retain control over social and economic developments The study focuses on two and a half million people in three prefectures of northeast Henan the central province in the heart of the central plain a common synecdoche for China The author argues that this population may have been more representative of the Chinese people at large than were the residents of more prosperous regions Many diverse individuals in northeast Henan invoked historical models to deal with the present and shape the future Though they differed in the lessons they drew they shared the view that the Han dynasty was particularly relevant to their own time Han and Ming politics were integral parts of a pattern of Chinese historical development that has lasted to the present

Culinary Culture in Colonial India Utsa Ray, 2015-01-05 This book utilizes cuisine to understand the construction of the colonial middle class in Bengal who indigenized new culinary experiences as a result of colonial modernity This process of indigenization developed certain social practices including imagination of the act of cooking as a classic feminine act and the domestic kitchen as a sacred space The process of indigenization was an aesthetic choice that was imbricated in the upper caste and patriarchal agenda of the middle class social reform However in these acts of imagination there were important elements of continuity from the pre colonial times The book establishes the fact that Bengali cuisine cannot be labeled as indigenist although it never became widely commercialized The point was to cosmopolitanize the domestic and yet keep its tag of Bengaliness The resultant cuisine was hybrid in many senses like its makers

Tuning Out Blackness

Yeidy M. Rivero, 2005-07-06 Tuning Out Blackness fills a glaring omission in U S and Latin American television studies by looking at the history of Puerto Rican television. In exploring the political and cultural dynamics that have shaped racial representations in Puerto Rico's commercial media from the late 1940s to the 1990s, Yeidy M. Rivero advances critical discussions about race, ethnicity, and the media. She shows that televisual representations of race have belied the racial egalitarianism that allegedly pervades Puerto Rico's national culture. White performers in blackface have often portrayed blackness in local television productions while black actors have been largely excluded. Drawing on interviews, participant observation, archival research, and textual analysis, Rivero considers representations of race in Puerto Rico, taking into account how they are intertwined with the island's status as a U S commonwealth, its national culture, its relationship with Cuba before the Cuban Revolution in 1959, and the massive influx of Cuban migrants after 1960. She focuses on locally produced radio and television shows, particular television events and characters that became popular media icons, from the performer Ramón Rivera's use of blackface and black voice in the 1940s and 1950s to the battle between black actors and television industry officials over racism in the 1970s to the creation in the 1990s of the first Puerto Rican situation comedy featuring a black family. As the twentieth century drew to a close, multinational corporations had purchased all Puerto Rican stations and threatened to wipe out locally produced programs. Tuning Out Blackness brings to the forefront the marginalization of nonwhite citizens in Puerto Rico's media culture and raises important questions about the significance of local sites of television production.

Southeast Asia Donald G McCloud, 2018-02-07 Bridging the perceived gap between Southeast Asia's historical and contemporary situations. Donald McCloud focuses on continuities in the region's internal dynamics as well as its relationship to the greater global environment. The author challenges widely held views that diversity and fragmentation are the hallmarks of the region, identifying instead the commonalities that have bound the countries of Southeast Asia together through at least two millennia and have provided the basis for a unique regional dynamic. It has only been since World War II that Southeast Asians, long influenced by the global environment, have defined and developed their own institutions, social structures, and communities. Turning away from inadequate and unadaptable Western institutions, they have begun to create structures more in tune with their own historical experiences. Particularly in the political sphere, many of these new structures seemed to be straightforward military dictatorships. However, time has shown them to be more complex, and many unique organizational practices have developed that may presage more open political systems, if not democracies, by strict Western definitions. With the expansion of regional cooperation through ASEAN and strong economic growth, confidence among Southeast Asian states has grown as well. The growing references to an Asian way of life have given verbal expression to a surge in neotraditional values and behavior that have always been part of the fabric of Asian life but that in the past were frowned upon as nonwestern. This text traces the evolution of Southeast Asia and focuses for the first time on the neotraditional bases for contemporary independent development of the region.

The Many Faces of

Taiwan's Cultural Diplomacy Astrid Lipinsky, Hsin-Huang Michael Hsiao, 2023-04 This is a pioneering book on Taiwan's cultural diplomacy. It then identifies three effective areas to implement cultural diplomacy: films, music, and the academic field of Taiwan studies. Dr. Astrid Lipinsky is Managing Director of the Vienna Center for Taiwan Studies at University of Vienna, Austria.
