

Politics and Society in Contemporary France (1789-1971)

A DOCUMENTARY HISTORY

Intended to facilitate a textual approach to the study and teaching of contemporary French history, this book brings together, for the first time, a comprehensive selection of basic sources in French: constitutions and laws; speeches and press-conferences; party programmes; papal encyclicals and other documents. The texts are grouped in chronological order under subject headings: (1) political and social divisions dating back to the French Revolution (2) parliamentary institutions (3) political parties (4) social classes (5) trade unionism and social welfare (6) education (7) Church, State, and Society. Emphasis has been laid on the most recent period up to the death of General de Gaulle, so that the vantage point is predominantly that of the present. At the same time, the documents set out to illustrate the institutional and ideological foundations of contemporary France dating back to the first decades of the Third Republic and earlier.

Wherever possible, the texts have been carefully collated with the original, giving a complete reference to the source used. All sources have been faithfully reproduced right down to the punctuation except in rare cases where this would have led to real eccentricity. Full introductory essays are provided in English to make the texts more readily approachable by students of French and other non-specialists and each section also includes a glossary of the specialised vocabulary and a bibliography.
