Abstract: Intelligent energy management in renewable-based power distribution applications, such as microgrids, smart grids, smart buildings, and EV systems, is becoming increasingly important in the context of the transition toward the decentralization, digitalization, and decarbonization of energy networks. Arguably, many challenges can be overcome, and benefits leveraged, in this transition by the adoption of intelligent autonomous computer-based decision-making through the introduction of smart technologies, specifically artificial intelligence. Unlike other numerical or soft computing optimization methods, the control based on artificial intelligence allows the decentralized power units to collaborate in making the best decision of fulfilling the administrator's needs, rather than only a primitive decentralization based only on the division of tasks. Amongst the smart approaches, reinforcement learning stands as the most relevant and successful, particularly in power distribution management applications. The reason is it does not need an accurate model for attaining an optimized solution regarding the interaction with the environment. Accordingly, there is an ongoing need to accomplish a clear, up-to-date, vision of the development level, especially with the lack of recent comprehensive detailed reviews of this vitally important research field. Therefore, this paper fulfills the need and presents a comprehensive review of the state-of-the-art successful and distinguished intelligent control strategies-based RL in optimizing the management of power flow and distribution. Wherein extensive importance is given to the classification of the literature on emerging strategies, the proposals based on RL multiagent, and the multiagent primary secondary control of managing power flow in micro and smart grids, particularly the energy storage. As a result, 126 of the most relevant, recent, and non-incremental have been reviewed and put into relevant categories. Furthermore, salient features have been identified of the major positive and negative, of each selection.

1. Introduction

The control of renewable energy in modern power distribution applications, such as microgrids, smart grids, smart buildings, and electric vehicles (EVs) applications, is experiencing a large, fundamental transition due to several technological advances and environmental considerations. For instance, the world is gearing toward the enhancement of the introduction of renewable energy and transportation based on either EVs or alternative fuels, due to their economic, technical, and environmental advantages [1]. However, the current global electricity and alternative fuel generation is still a mixed fuel, with the supremacy of fossil fuel remaining in many regions of the world. In fact, both trends are fundamentally related since the use of renewable energy in charging EVs or generating alternative fuels such as hydrogen would significantly reduce greenhouse gas emissions [2]. Optimal power distribution control is the most prominent challenge in enhancing the penetration and sustainability of renewable energy and reducing the use of fossil fuels, due

Separation of Powers in African Constitutionalism

Charles M. Fombad, 2016-03-03 The new series Stellenbosch Handbooks in African Constitutional Law will engage with contemporary issues of constitutionalism in Africa filling a notable gap in African comparative constitutional law Separation of Powers in African Constitutionalism is the first in the series examining one of the critical measures introduced by African constitutional designers in their attempts to entrench an ethos of constitutionalism on the continent Taking a critical look at the different ways in which attempts have been made to separate the different branches of government the Handbook examines the impact this is having on transparent and accountable governance Beginning with an overview of constitutionalism in Africa and the different influences on modern African constitutional developments it looks at the relationship between the legislature and the executive as well as the relationship between the judiciary and the political branches Despite differences in approaches between the different constitutional cultures that have influenced developments in Africa there remain common problems One of these problems is the constant friction in the relationship between the three branches and the resurgent threats of authoritarianism which clearly suggest that there remain serious problems in both constitutional design and implementation The book also studies the increasing role being played by independent constitutional institutions and how they complement the checks and balances associated with the traditional three branches of government

A Theory of Global

Governance Michael Zürn, 2018-03-09 This book offers a major new theory of global governance explaining both its rise and what many see as its current crisis The author suggests that world politics is now embedded in a normative and institutional structure dominated by hierarchies and power inequalities and therefore inherently creates contestation resistance and distributional struggles Within an ambitious and systematic new conceptual framework the theory makes four key contributions Firstly it reconstructs global governance as a political system which builds on normative principles and reflexive authorities Second it identifies the central legitimation problems of the global governance system with a constitutionalist setting in mind Third it explains the rise of state and societal contestation by identifying key endogenous dynamics and probing the causal mechanisms that produced them Finally it identifies the conditions under which struggles in the global governance system lead to decline or deepening Rich with propositions insights and evidence the book promises to be the most important and comprehensive theoretical argument about world politics of the 21st century Public Information Management and E-Government: Policy and Issues Brown, Mary Maureen, Garson, G. David, 2013-02-28 Recently the public sector has given an increasing amount of national and international attention to electronic government systems Therefore it is inevitable that the theoretical implications and intersections between information technology and governmental matters are more widely discussed Public Information Management and E Government Policy and Issues offers a fresh comprehensive dialogue on issues that occur between the public management and information technology domains With its focus on political issues and their effects on the larger public sector this book is valuable for administrators researchers students and educators who wish to gain foundational and theoretical knowledge on e government policies

Organizations C.C. Pinder, L.F. Moore, 2012-12-06 Late one afternoon in the fall of 1976 we were sipping Sanka and speculating on the possible directions towards which research and theory in organizational science might lead One of us had just re read Walter Nord's Marxist critique of Human Resource Management and the discussion evolved into an enumeration of the many articles that had appeared in the recent literature attacking the discipline its mission and its methods In no time the list was long enough to suggest that a number of scholars both young and established were dissatisfied with the rate of progress begin made in the accumulation of knowledge about organizations The critics we identified were located at many different schools and they were associated with diverse research traditions and biases The causes they identified as underlying the problems they cited varied as did the solutions they offered We decided to pursue these polemics with a view to seeking commonalities among them hoping that if there were any dominant common themes it might be possible to anticipate the directions the field could take Our reading and thinking led us to the conclusion that many of the issues being raised by the critics of the discipline could be seen as disagreements over some implicit or ignored metaphysical and epistemological assumptions about organizations We hypothesized that much of the controversy resulted from a lack of consensus regarding what organizations are and how knowledge about them can be developed American Highway

Technology and Transition Abdelkader Djeflat,Girma Zawdie,2014-01-14 The Maghreb countries had a promising start in economic growth after independence For the most part they thrived on industrialisation by import substitution but unfortunately this strategy left them with macroeconomic and structural imbalances which together have effectively constrained their ability to compete in the world economic system and to catch up with the rapidly changing global technological economic circumstances Issues relating to aspects of technology transfer to the Maghreb strategies for technological and resource development and the integration of education and R D systems with the productive systems of the economies in the region are discussed along with relevant cases from Mexico China South Korea India and Bangladesh
