Chang,1981 Why Do People Decline Free Preventive Health Care? Katherine Grace Carman,Peter Kooreman,2007 For many health conditions the best treatment is prevention To this end many countries and insurers around the world encourage individuals to participate in preventive care Citizens in the Netherlands are offered several preventive health care interventions free of charge including flu shots mammograms and kidney checks Despite little to no direct costs to the patient many people fail to participate in these programs The aim of this paper is to explain participation Our primary data source is the CentERpanel which contains rich information on socioeconomic variables as well as in an extra module on health status and the use of preventive health care The CentERpanel includes over 2000 Dutch households who participate in weekly internet surveys Similar to other future investments there are many reasons why people may not participate in these programs While for some people it is likely to be rational not to participate many individuals who should rationally participate actually do not However myopia cognitive biases and lack of information or understanding about the costs and benefits of these programs may lead others to irrationally choose not to participate Additionally fear of unfavorable diagnoses particularly cancer often leads people to decline screening or medical treatment altogether In vaccination programs controversy about the effectiveness and possible negative side effects may play a role in the participation decision We empirically assess the importance of these different explanations and investigate how they relate to socioeconomic characteristics of individuals and social interactions We also consider the relationship with forward looking choices such as savings and insurance which may serve as indicator of individuals discount rates The paper contributes to a fuller understanding of participation decisions in preventive health care and to creating more effective preventive care programs in the future Inequalities in Preventive Health Services Offered Federal Employees United States. What Is Preventive Healthcare, The Different Types Of Preventive Healthcare Services That People Can Receive, The Benefits Of Receiving Worthwhile Preventive Healthcare Services, And How To Receive An Effective Form Of Preventive Healthcare Dr. Harrison Sachs, 2023-12-12 This essay sheds light on what is preventive healthcare demystifies the different types of preventive healthcare services that people can receive reveals the benefits of receiving worthwhile preventive healthcare services and explicates how to receive an effective form of preventive healthcare by following health optimization measures Succinctly stated preventive healthcare is not solely limited to the implementation of healthcare measures that are conducive to preempting chronic diseases An integral component of preventive healthcare encompasses receiving screenings for adverse health conditions and chronic diseases Preventive healthcare can also include receiving health related counseling that encourages the abstinence of engaging in insalubrious activities and that also promote the implementation health optimization measures The totality of preventive healthcare is broad in scope and is also inclusive of an exorbitant amount of preventive healthcare services Procuring preventive healthcare services can allow you to be able to screen for health issues and possibly even identify health issues before symptoms develop Preventive healthcare services can for instance encompass undergoing screenings for chronic diseases such as cardiovascular disease type 2 diabetes chronic kidney disease osteoporosis and cancer Without procuring preventive healthcare services a person may be acutely unaware that he has contracted a chronic disease When a chronic disease is in its incipience a person may be unaware that he has contracted a chronic disease As a chronic disease further progress the effects of the chronic disease become all the more harrow to experience first hand If a person desists from implementing health optimization measures then he renders himself at a significantly higher probability of contracting a chronic disease If a person who is on a trajectory to contract a chronic disease does not have a chronic disease at this juncture then he may lack awareness that he is on a trajectory to contract a chronic disease if he desists from procuring preventive healthcare services When a person becomes acutely aware that he is on a trajectory to contract a chronic disease post procuring preventive healthcare services then he may possibly become all the more apt to abstain from implementing chronic disease inducing measures in the pending future in contexts in which he cares an iota about the future state of his overall health Contracting a chronic disease can adversely impact multiple facets of a person s health A person should never implement chronic disease inducing measures Preventive healthcare services are not limited to receiving screenings for maladies Additional preventive healthcare services can for instance encompass receiving preventive healthcare check ups and receiving preventive healthcare consultations When a person receives an annual physical examination during an annual physical appointment then it may help a medical doctor to ascertain if the customer is on a trajectory to contract a chronic disease based on the results of the annual physical examination When a person receives health related counseling during a consultation appointment that encourages the abstinence of engaging in insalubrious activities and that also promotes the implementation of health optimization measures then it can potential sway the customer to desist from engaging in insalubrious activities and opt to follow health optimization measures if the customer is on a trajectory to contract a chronic disease and if the customer also cares a modicum about the future state of his overall health If a person does not care an iota about the future state of his overall health then receiving preventive healthcare services will not have any bearing on helping him to preclude contracting chronic diseases When a person becomes acutely aware that he is on a trajectory to contract a chronic disease post receiving preventive healthcare services then it does not necessarily always yield the outcome of a customer becoming keen on following health optimization measures for the prospect of averting the contraction of a chronic disease if he does not care an iota about the future state of his overall health A person who is on a trajectory to contract a chronic disease is at liberty to choose whether or not to follow health optimization measures
