The Urban Origins of Suburban Autonomy Richardson Dilworth,2005-02-28 Using the urbanized area that spreads across northern New Jersey and around New York City as a case study this book presents a convincing explanation of metropolitan fragmentation the process by which suburban communities remain as is or break off and form separate political entities The process has important and deleterious consequences for a range of urban issues including the weakening of public finance and school integration The explanation centers on the independent effect of urban infrastructure specifically sewers roads waterworks gas and electricity networks The book argues that the development of such infrastructure in the late nineteenth century not only permitted cities to expand by annexing adjacent municipalities but also further enhanced the ability of these suburban entities to remain or break away and form independent municipalities The process was crucial in creating a proliferation of municipalities within metropolitan regions The book thus shows that the roots of the urban crisis can be found in the interplay between technology politics and public works in the American city

America's Agenda, The Commission's major recommendations include establishing an Economic Security Council to focus the president and the federal government on economic issues dramatically increasing federal public investment in infrastructure and job skills creating new tax incentives for private investment and implementing comprehensive reforms to control healthcare costs and provide access for all Americans Governor Mario M Cuomo's Commission on Competitiveness consists of 28 leaders from both the private and public sectors The Commission's first report was released in 1988 and received much critical acclaim The first report predicted that without a program to improve the nation's competitiveness our economy would continue to decline America's Agenda offers the nation its best chance for rebuilding economic strength and regaining prosperity

BOOK JACKET Legal, Institutional, and Economic Indicators of Forest Conservation and Sustainable Management, 2005 This review looks at the Nation's legal institutional and economic capacity to promote forest conservation and sustainable resource management It focuses on 20 indicators of Criterion Seven of the so called Montreal Process and involves an extensive search and synthesis of information from a variety of sources It identifies ways to fill information gaps and improve the usefulness of several indicators It concludes that there is substantial information about the application of such capacities although that application is widely dispersed among agencies and private interests which in turn has led to differing interpretations of the indicators Individual chapters identify a need to further develop the conceptual foundation on which many of the indicators are predicated While many uncertainties in the type and accuracy of information are brought to light the review clearly indicates that legal institutional and economic capacities to promote sustainability are large and widely available in both the public and private sectors P vi

Debt Wish Alberta Sbragia, 1996-05-15 Albert Sbragia considers American urban government as an investor whether for building infrastructure or supporting economic development Over time such investment has become disconnected from the normal political and administrative processes of local policymaking through the use of special public spending authorities like water and sewer commissions and port turnpike and public power authorities Sbragia explores how this entrepreneurial activity developed and how federal and state policies facilitated or limited it She also analyzes the implications of cities creating innovative special purpose quasi governments to circumvent and dilute state control over city finances diluting their own authority in the process To Examine the Future of Our Nation's Infrastructure Needs United States. Congress. House. Committee on Public Works and Transportation,1991
