into action but once she began to reach out she found a whole army of folks waiting and ready to help her The team of people supporting her eventually grew to include an EMDR therapist a psychiatrist her peers at a trauma retreat and a lawyer who made the case for medical retirement and workers compensation Along the way Christy learned the vital truths that made it possible to keep going even in her darkest moments that post traumatic stress was literally a brain injury that suicide and alcohol were not the only ways out that asking for help was a sign of strength not weakness and that although it was ultimately up to her to do the work to change the dialogue in her head she was not alone Flash Marriage: Husband is
