Introduction: Macroeconomics is the study of the economy as a whole, and it affects managerial decision making in the commercial sector. For example, if you're a manager in a company that sells products to consumers, you will need to understand how macroeconomic conditions affect your business. In this article, we'll look at how macroeconomics affects two important areas of managerial decision making: price determination and investment.

What is Macroeconomics.

Macroeconomics is the study of economic relationships within the economic system. It covers things like how money and prices are related, what factors affect production and consumption, how government intervention affects the economy, and how market forces affect prices and production.

Macroeconomic Indicators.

macroeconomic indicators are measures that help economists determine whether or not a particular policy or situation is causing an existing trend or change in the overall economy. Some common macroeconomic indicators include GDP growth, unemployment rates, corporate profits, interest rates, stock prices, and inflation rates.
