Mad Blasts:

History of Shock Waves, Explosions and Impact Peter O. K. Krehl, 2008-09-24 This unique and encyclopedic reference work describes the evolution of the physics of modern shock wave and detonation from the earlier and classical percussion. The history of this complex process is first reviewed in a general survey. Subsequently the subject is treated in more detail and the book is richly illustrated in the form of a picture gallery. Blast, 1967 Active tectonics of the Hellenic subduction zone Beth Shaw, 2012-01-11 This thesis is remarkable for the wide range of the techniques and observations used and for its insights which cross several disciplines. It begins by solving a famous puzzle of the ancient world which is what was responsible for the tsunami that destroyed settlements in the eastern Mediterranean in 365 AD. By radiocarbon dating of preserved marine organisms, Shaw demonstrates that the whole of western Crete was lifted out of the sea by up to 10 meters in a massive earthquake at that time which occurred on a previously unknown fault. The author shows that the resulting tsunami would have the characteristics described by ancient writers and uses modern GPS measurements and coastline geomorphology to show that the strain build up near Crete requires such a tsunami earthquake about every 6 000 years, a major insight into Mediterranean tsunami hazard. A detailed seismological study of earthquakes in the Cretan arc over the last 50 years reveals other important features of its behaviour that were previously unknown. Finally, she provides fundamental insights into the limitations of radiocarbon dating marine organisms relating to how they secrete carbon into their skeletons. The thesis resulted in three major papers in top journals.
