Revolution nation builders artists and intellectuals manufactured ideologies that continue to give shape to popular understandings of indigeneity and mestizaje today Postrevolutionary identity tropes emerged as part of broader efforts to reunify the nation and solve pressing social concerns including what was posited in the racist rhetoric of the time as the Indian problem Through a complex alchemy of appropriation and erasure indigeneity was idealized as a relic of the past while mestizaje was positioned as the race of the future This period of identity formation coincided with a boom in technology that introduced a sudden proliferation of images on the streets and in homes there were more photographs in newspapers movie houses cropped up across the country and printing houses mass produced calendar art and postcards La Raza Cosmética traces postrevolutionary identity ideals and debates as they were dispersed to the greater public through emerging visual culture Critically examining beauty pageants cinema tourism propaganda photography murals and more Natasha

Varner shows how postrevolutionary understandings of mexicanidad were fundamentally structured by legacies of colonialism as well as shifting ideas about race place and gender This interdisciplinary study smartly weaves together cultural history Indigenous and settler colonial studies film and popular culture analysis and environmental and urban history It also traces a range of Indigenous interventions in order to disrupt top down understandings of national identity construction and to people this history with voices that have all too often been entirely ignored
