

MICHAEL INNES

An impressionistic painting of a landscape. In the foreground, there are dark, dense bushes and trees. A path or road leads from the bottom center towards the middle ground, flanked by tall, dark, conical cypress trees. The background is a bright, hazy landscape with warm yellow and orange tones, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The overall style is soft and painterly, with visible brushstrokes and a rich color palette.

Parker,2010-07-01 Between 1735 and 1748 hundreds of young men and their families emigrated from the Scottish Highlands to the Georgia coast to settle and protect the new British colony. These men were recruited by the trustees of the colony and military governor James Oglethorpe who wanted settlers who were accustomed to hardship, militant in nature and willing to become frontier farmer soldiers. In this respect the Highlanders fit the bill perfectly through training and tradition. Recruiting and settling the Scottish Highlanders as the first line of defense on the southern frontier in Georgia was an important decision on the part of the trustees and crucial for the survival of the colony, but this portion of Georgia's history has been sadly neglected until now. By focusing on the Scots themselves, Anthony W. Parker explains what factors motivated the Highlanders to leave their native glens of Scotland for the pine barrens of Georgia and attempts to account for the reasons their cultural distinctiveness and old world experience aptly prepared them to play a vital role in the survival of Georgia in this early and precarious moment in its history.
