personal example is much more powerful than a thousand sermons We love our children and we want the best for them The least we can do is to model behaviours that empower them to achieve their goals and dreams Being financially literate is a significant component in that equation We want our children to negotiate from a position of strength not weakness The time to start is while they are still young The best place to start is home You want to have control over what or who influences your children especially when they are at the stage of figuring out who they are In a culture of consumerism and instant gratification it is easy for our children to feel entitled and spend whatever money that comes into their hands Financial freedom is the cornerstone of other freedoms It gives you the freedom to choose In an entrepreneurial world where job security is gone with the wind it is becoming more crucial for individuals to take their financial destinies in their hands rather than depend on their employers to do so The world we grew up in no longer exists Raising our children the way we were raised is simply preparing them for a world that no longer exists The children are our future We can shape that future by passing on our values and teaching them key skills to thrive in all seasons If our job is well done our children will not need to run back home in the future for a bailout They will be able to stand on their two feet thrive and make the contribution they were born to make
