Monitoring Wilderness Stream Ecosystems:

Monitoring Wilderness Stream Ecosystems Jeffrey C. Davis, Rocky Mountain Research Station--Ogden, 1999

Monitoring Wilderness Stream Ecosystems Jeffrey C. Davis, 2001 Provides detailed guidance on how to acquire data on wilderness streams It offers instruction on monitoring the entire range of structural functional stream parameters in a staged monitoring system that provides increasing detail rigor at each successive stage This staged system offers maximum flexibility allowing modification for particular situations goals needs The manual is organized in a manner that while ensuring the analysis of key factors allows for modification to address particular objectives Monitoring goals generally fall into two main categories obtaining baseline information or evaluating potential impacts Illustrated Monitoring Wilderness Stream Ecosystems Jeffrey C. Davis, 2001 A protocol and methods for monitoring the major physical chemical and biological components of stream ecosystems are presented The monitoring protocol is organized into four stages At stage 1 information is obtained on a basic set of parameters that describe stream ecosystems Each following stage builds upon stage 1 by increasing the number of parameters and the detail and frequency of the measurements Stage 4 supplements analyses of stream biotic structure with measurements of stream function carbon and nutrient processes Standard methods are presented that were selected or modified through extensive field application for use in remote settings Monitoring Wilderness Stream Ecosystems, 1998 MONITORING WILDERNESS STREAM ECOSYSTEMS... GENERAL TECHNICAL REPORT RMRS-GTR-21... U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE... FEBRUARY 1999, 1999 Global Change and River Ecosystems - Implications for Structure, Function and Ecosystem Services R. Jan Stevenson, Sergi Sabater, 2015-03-21 Rivers around the world are threatened by changes in land use climate hydrologic cycles and biodiversity Global changes in rivers include but are not restricted to water flow interruptions temperature increases loss of hydrological connectivity altered water residence times changes in nutrient loads increasing arrival of new chemicals simplification of the physical structure of the systems occurrence of invasive species and biodiversity losses All of them affect the structure and functioning of the river ecosystem and thereby their ecosystem services Understanding the responses of river ecosystems and their services to global change is essential for protecting human well being in all corners of the planet Rivers provide critical benefits by providing food from fisheries and irrigation regulating biogeochemical balances and enriching our aesthetic and cultural experience Predicting responses of rivers to global change is challenged by the complexity of interactions among these man made drivers across a mosaic of natural hydrogeomorphic and climatic settings This book explores the broad range of determinants defining global change and their effects on river ecosystems Authors have provided thoughtful and insightful treatments of specific topics that relate to the broader theme of global change regulation of river ecosystems Methods in Stream Ecology F. River Ecology and Management Robert Naiman,Robert E. Bilby,2001-02-16 As the vast expanses of natural forests and the great populations of salmonids are harvested to support a rapidly expanding human population the need to understand streams as ecological systems and to manage them effectively becomes increasingly urgent The unfortunate legacy of such natural resource exploitation is well documented For several decades the Pacific coastal ecoregion of North America has served as a natural laboratory for scientific and managerial advancements in stream ecology and much has been learned about how to better integrate ecological processes and characteristics with a human dominated environment These insightful but hard learned ecological and social lessons are the subject of this book Integrating land and rivers as interactive components of ecosystems and watersheds has provided the ecological sciences with important theoretical foundations Even though scientific disciplines have begun to integrate land based processes with streams and rivers the institutions and processes charged with managing these systems have not done so successfully As a result many of the watersheds of the Pacific coastal ecoregion no longer support natural settings for environmental processes or the valuable natural resources those processes create An important role for scientists educators and decision makers is to make the integration between ecology and consumptive uses more widely understood as well as useful for effective management
