Abstract—The regional government has an important duty because it will determine the sustainability of the area. The problems can disrupt the stability of the region, such as natural disasters, poverty, social conflict, environmental damage, reduced value of local wisdom, intolerance, conflicts between tribes and religions, weakening of social roles, and other social problems. The purpose of this study is to determine the role of local political leadership in managing diversity based on Pancasila in Kudus Regency, especially in Colo Village and Karangrejo Village. This study also aims to find out the dynamics of local politics in managing diversity in Kudus Regency. The method of this study is a qualitative research method. The research subjects are the Head of Colo village, religious leaders in Kudus Regency, Political Observer, NGOs, and Kudus Regency community. The research method used the methods of observation, documentation and interviews with academics, members of community organizations, as well as the village officials in Kudus Regency. The results showed that firstly, the role of local political leadership in Kudus Regency in maintaining diversity was influenced by the historical factors with the presence of Sunan Kudus and Sunan Muria. The leadership of Sunan Kudus and Sunan Muria still attached to the present especially in relations of tolerance among religious people, especially Islam and Hinduism. Second, this are economic factors with the existence of trade activities carried out by Javanese people with Chinese people. Third, the industrial factors with the majority of employees are obedient women who are prone to conflict. In addition, the fourth factor is the existence of influential clerical figures in political activities, and the five roles of the local community leaders with the existence of a community of belief groups that number up to nine types.

1. INTRODUCTION

Regional autonomy uses the broadest principle of the authority to manage and to regulate all government affairs outside of the central government affairs that have been stipulated by law. The regional government is one of the cornerstones of the important governance system changes in the history of the political development [1]. The principle of regional autonomy basically remains the same, namely to carry out regional autonomy that is oriented towards improving people's welfare. Then, it always pays attention to the interests and aspirations that grow in the community to accelerate development and prosperity. The purpose of regional autonomy can be achieved if the components of the autonomous region can work well in accordance with the mandate of the 1945 Constitution and also the Law. One of the important components in realizing the objectives of regional autonomy is the role of the leader [2]. In order to realize the idea of a welfare state, the responsible leadership is required. The exemplary center of this leadership nature is the spirit of state administrators.

The role of the leader will determine the sustainability of the region. Since the principle of regional autonomy was put in place, it actually gave rise to small kings in the area which led to criminal acts of corruption. This results in fading public trust in the leader. Efforts are required from the regional heads and state administrators to restore public trust to their leaders. To restore people's trust in politics is required more than just a good leader, but a leader with characteristics that show the strength of character, greatness, and vision idea [3]. Unfortunately, there are still a few regional leaders who have the strength of character, especially the spirit to make changes even though the governance is more complex.

Indonesia has a lot of natural and cultural wealth. Natural and cultural wealth has a positive impact on development. Cultural wealth can be seen as a symbol of diversity in Indonesia. While the negative impact is that differences can become of conflict if the community does not have an awareness of mutual respect. Moreover, technological advancements cause social problems that disrupt the stability of the country and also the region. Social welfare problems are natural disasters, poverty, social conflict, low awareness of environmental preservation, weakening roles and functions of social institutions and other social problems[4]. In this case, there are still many regional heads who have not been able to overcome these problems.

Potential conflicts severely threaten in several regions in Indonesia. One potential threat that threatens is inter-tribal conflict and religious anarchisms. According to Jati, the loss of local wisdom makes the religious

Black Political Mobilization, Leadership, Power and Mass Behavior Minion K. C. Morrison, 1987-01-01

Black Political Mobilization accounts for the political success of black Americans in the South. Minion Morrison returns to Mississippi the center of much of the political activism of the 1960s to analyze the remarkable improvement in black electoral participation in the years following passage of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Mississippi's substantial black population has experienced marked electoral success despite a history of strict racial exclusion. The dramatic and widespread nature of mobilization there makes it one of the most illustrative case studies for exploring this period of political change in America. Mississippi represents a broader phenomenon of political change that sustains a new leadership class in the Southern region. Three rural Mississippi towns serve as the focal point for the study. They each have a population of under 2,000, have overwhelming Afro-American voting majorities, are poor and largely agricultural, have been affected by the civil rights movement of the 60s and have elected a black mayor since 1973. The towns are prime examples of the character and process of minority electoral politics and mobilization in the rural South. A new class of black leaders is nurtured and installed in office in an environment where a newly and highly mobilized constituency takes advantage of its majority status in the electorate. This book combines good theory with lively interviews and rich case histories to highlight an essentially new variety of participatory democracy in American politics and government. Urban Democracy Oscar W. Gabriel, Vincent Hoffmann-Martinot, Hank V. Savitch, 2012-12-06

Among social scientists consensus exists on urbanization as an indispensable aspect of social modernization. During the last century the process of industrialization was accompanied by a huge wave of migration from rural to urban areas. The formation of big cities in turn made up the base for an increase of mass education as well as the spread of mass media. The changes induced by urbanization did not only have a strong impact on the structure of the society but also did deeply change the way of social life. By the end of the 21st century again a close link seems to exist between the socio-economic transformation of the Western world on the one hand and a new stage in the process of urbanization on the other hand. The service economy having replaced industrial production as the most important domain of economic life essentially needs the social and cultural infrastructure provided by urban or even metropolitan areas. Due to the development of fast and highly efficient systems of mass transportation processes of social, cultural and economic exchanges between the different parts of the world but primarily between metropolitan areas. The development of new media of communication has facilitated the exchange of information of any kind not only within a society but moreover between societies separated by a large territorial distance from each other.
