Crittenden,2024-08-24 Reprint of the original first published in 1877 New Books on Women and Feminism ,1999 Struggling to Find a Voice. Women's Position in Hindu Tradition and The Novels of Shashi Deshpande Eliana Briel,2017-09-20 Master s Thesis from the year 2014 in the subject Didactics for the subject English Literature Works grade 1 0 University of Tübingen Englisches Seminar language English abstract The South Asian country of India immediately evokes an array of preconceptions in the Western mind be it the land of Mahatma Gandhi and Rabindranath Tagore of extreme poverty and extreme wealth of colours fragrances and spices of the holy cow and its connected cultural and spiritual richness or of Bollywood Nowadays however the media focuses more and more on one issue India s ill treatment of women This master s thesis by the title of Struggling to Find a Voice will be composed of two major pillars women s position in Hindu tradition and the study of two novels of Shashi Deshpande The first part will focus on the changing role of Hindu women throughout Indian history from its beginnings in the Vedic times until today The paper intends to address the most important stages in what could be called a rollercoaster of prohibitions submission and rights from a quasi equal position in ancient India to a slave like existence in the Middle Ages a dawn of hope during the British Raj and the post Independence period up until recent events and struggles As Deshpande s protagonists Saru and Jaya both belong to the Hindu middle class the historical overview will concentrate first and foremost on Hindu women The insights gained in the first part will then provide the backbone for the analysis of the novels to follow The second part will be an in depth analysis of Shashi Deshpande s novels The Dark Holds No Terrors 1980 and That Long Silence 1988 Both of the two novels protagonists Saru and Jaya form part of the educated Indian middle class and are because of their sex caught between the traditional orthodox image of a Hindu housewife and the modern Western concepts of emancipation and equality The paper intends to examine how they struggle to come to terms with this fragmentation of their selves and how they find a balance between their traditional roles as a housewife and mother and their own modern expectations The relationship of being silent to oppressing one's own identity will be looked at more closely as well as the factors which help them to raise their voices in the end Finally the conclusion will not only summarise the findings but also link the first part of this Masterarbeit with the second part under the heading Struggling to Find a Voice

H. Earle, 2025-05 In Silence in the Quagmire Harriet E H Earle uses silence to construct a narrative of the Vietnam War via US comics Unlike the vast majority of cultural artifacts and scholarly works about the war which typically focus on white working class American servicemen and their experiences of combat Earle's work centers less visible players the Vietnamese on both sides of the conflict women and girls and returning veterans Earle interrogates the ways this conflict is represented in American comic books with special focus on these missing groups She discusses how and more critically why these groups are represented as they are if they re represented at all and the ways these representations have affected views of the war during and since Using Michel Foucault s understanding of silence as discourse Earle considers how both silence and silencing are mobilized in the creation of the U S centric war narrative Innovative in its structure and theoretical scaffolding Silence in the Quagmire deepens our understanding of how comic books have represented the violence and trauma of conflict
