Thomas, 2015-06-26 Excerpt from Sex and Society Studies in the Social Psychology of Sex A grand difference between plant and animal life lies in the fact that the plant is concerned chiefly with storing energy and the animal with consuming it The plant by a very slow process converts lifeless into living matter expending little energy and living at a profit The animal is unable to change lifeless into living matter but has developed organs of locomotion ingestion and digestion which enable it to prevail upon the plant world and upon other animal forms and in contrast with plant life it lives at a loss of energy Expressed in biological formula the habit of the plant is predominantly anabolic that of the animal predominantly katabolic Certain biologists limiting their attention in the main to the lower forms of life have maintained very plausibly that males are more katabolic than females and that maleness is the product of influences tending to produce a katabolic habit of body About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
