

Introduction: Application of Economic Principles

Economics is a systematic way of thinking about a wider range of personal and social problems. One is persons has measured other perspectives and dimensions, opportunities to explain others against every choice. These principles allow the thinker to sort out some basic questions in the daily aspects of the work world, in the statements of politicians and special interest groups, and in the conversations of friends and neighbors. The application of these principles allows people to sort some complex issues that arise by increasing their ability to understand what goes on around them.

It doesn't require a Ph.D. in economics to master the systematic way of thinking. In fact, this way of thinking rests upon a set of very simple principles:

1. Economic thinking recognizes that providing more goods involves a cost in sacrifice of other goods. More goods are not free.
2. Economic thinking makes decisions about how to allocate resources that economic goods are scarce and allows answers to them as good as the limited possible cost.
3. Economic thinking recognizes that individuals make no decisions thinking. No the personal interests that choosing an alternative interest, a person is most likely to choose that option or, if other costs increase, reject it.
4. Every economic system has several effects. In addition to the direct result of an action, there are secondary effects that also must be identified and considered.
