Thomson,2012-12-06 Therapeutic immunosuppression has very broad applications in clinical medicine ranging from prevention and treatment of organ and bone marrow transplant rejection management of various autoimmune disorders e g rheumatoid arthritis skin disease and asthma Whereas traditionally only a small repertoire of immunosuppressive agents was available for clinical use recent discoveries have significantly increased the number of approved agents resulting in numerous trials to further evaluate their potential In addition products of the biotechnology industry monoclonal antibodies cytokines cytokine antagonists and other products of genetic engineering that target key molecular pathways in disease pathogenesis have either already made or are on the verge of making an important impact on treatment There is also considerable interest in the potential of cell based therapies particularly hematopoietic stem and dendritic cell therapy of allo and autoimmunity Important recent advances in the immunotherapy of allergic diseases are also covered in this book Gene therapy offers considerable promise for
