Integrating the Individual and the Organization, The emphasis on organizational change in the corporate life of recent years including job redesign autonomous groups high performance work systems and the redesign of control systems owes a great deal to the pioneering work of Chris Argyris This book examines how individuals in organizations can become more effective in turn making organizations more effective It explores the conventional pyramidal structure of organizations in which there is top down control by managers over workers and examines their negative consequences These include organizational injustice and eventually irrational decision making Argyris also discusses the characteristic learning system of the modern organization which he describes as single loop in character This system he argues is only adequate enough to permit the organization to implement existing policies It does not permit the more difficult and comprehensive task of questioning underlying goals and assumptions which he terms double loop learning In this kind of learning the organization is able to confront the more difficult problems that affect organizations in a time of transition In his new introduction Argyris reviews the strengths and limitations of the argument advanced in Integrating the Individual and the Organization He describes why the pyramidal structure endures and why creating a self learning organization is an even more challenging task than he has imagined The book will be of interest to professionals with a long standing interest in organizational development as well as those just entering the field managers confronting the challenge of organization change and researchers in organizational behavior and theory

Industrial Peace & Role of Trade

Unions In India Dr Bhim Singh, 2014-01-01 The economic development of a country is largely dependent upon the industrial growth and development. It is in this context that industrial peace acquires significance. Disturbed and non-conducive industrial environment proportionately affects the industrial growth adversely. And therefore the relationship obtainable in any industry is a matter of great concern. Industrial environment is the outcome of the interaction among the actors of industrial relations. In this context, trade union leaders become a very significant actor as the activities of their followers which build the industrial environment is the outcome of their actions. Industrial peace has to be established by all means and that is the need of the hour. This cannot be achieved without the positive and constructive role of the trade union leaders. Trade union leaders have been viewed by authors as agents of adversarialism and it has been pronounced that they cannot imagine themselves making common cause with capital or even recognise that they have shared interest. Such impressions have been perceived by assessing the actions of their followers i.e. the workers. It is also argued that the leaders are not at all sensitive about their social responsibilities. The actions of workers or the followers of trade union leaders are directly proportional to the faith and confidence the followers have in their leaders. It is therefore very apt to assess and gauge the impression carried by the followers about their leaders. In the present scenario it is desirable that the leaders and their followers understand each other and their mutual relationship is harmonized to the maximum extent. A leader must have the capability to get himself acquainted with the developments taking place and communicate and direct his followers accordingly. The followers desire that their leader should rise from the level of fairly good to the level of exceptionally good. This maiden attempt of the author Dr Bhim Singh automatically gains significance and importance as he has been able to correlate the followers' perceptions about leadership qualities desired by the followers and its linkage with creation of industrial peace.

Manufacturing Knowledge Richard Gillespie, 1993-05-28 What motivates workers to work harder? What can management do to create a contented and productive workforce? Discussion of these questions would be incomplete without reference to the Hawthorne experiments, one of the most famous pieces of research ever conducted in the social and behavioral sciences. Drawing on the original records of the experiments and the personal papers of the researchers Richard Gillespie has reconstructed the intellectual and political dynamics of the experiments as they evolved from the tentative experimentation to seemingly authoritative publications Manufacturing Knowledge raises fundamental questions about the nature of scientific knowledge and about the assumptions and evidence that underlay debates on worker productivity Methods of Industrial Peace Nicholas Paine Gilman,1904 Industrial Disputes in Karnataka Dr.

Shivaputra Pothalkar,2018-04-26 Relations between labour and management occupy a prominent place in the various problems being faced by our industrial civilization guided by different often antagonistic ideologies the labour and management develop different orientations towards industry and various components of industrial environment Though an emphasis is placed on the mutual dependence and the virtues of industrial peace and harmony relationships between labour Hybridization of MNE Subsidiaries F. Becker-Ritterspach,2008-12-03 MNEs setting up subsidiaries in emerging markets face the ongoing question to what extent they can transfer their home grown or global organizational models This book looks at how the cross border transfer of production models in MNEs is related to strategic choices of firms and different kinds of contextual differences between countries Aspects of Industrial Relations in ASEAN Basu Sharma,1985 This study discusses the emerging trends in industrial relations systems in the ASEAN countries and inter country variations in the systems practised in these countries The Changing of Organizational Behavior Patterns Paul R.

Lawrence,1991-01-01 Many companies today are either undergoing drastic organizational changes or are faced with the prospect of having to make these changes in the near future The need for change may arise from internal sources growth in the size of the company the problem of aging or more frequently from external sources changes in the nature of markets in the technology of the industry or even cultural beliefs about the proper rewards of work and behavior for employers and employees This book is concerned with the process of change by which organizations achieve their purposes and meet the needs of their individual and group contributors Lawrence s study is centered on a medium sized supermarket chain in which several important management functions were being shifted from the home office to newly created store managers The origin and reasoning behind these organizational changes the methods of introducing them the process of shifting the roles of key individuals and the consequences of the changes are considered in detail The author s inquiry proceeds from four essential research questions What is the nature of the basic behavior patterns in this organization What are the key factors involved in changing those patterns Did significant measurement change occur If so how was it accomplished This volume first published in 1958 broke new ground in devising techniques to measure changes in behavior patterns of individuals in focusing attention on the behavior patterns of individuals at the management levels of an organization and in clarifying the stubborn facts of human behavior involved in changing administrative patterns The book will be of continuing interest to managers and administrators concerned with making key changes in customary supervisory practices and to sociologists for the way the book addresses the general issue of the conflicts between the shifting demands of large organizations and the integrity of the individual The new 1990 introduction by the author nicely illustrates his belief that the process of organizational change remains a central issue for American society The Road to Industrial Peace Carlton Koepge, 1953
