that housework and childcare primarily remain women's work. There are however also significant institutional differences among modern societies which determine a country's timing, speed and pattern of change from the traditional male breadwinner to the dual earner family model. In particular, the impact of males' resources on their female partners' employment careers is dependent on the welfare state regime. In conservative and Mediterranean welfare state regimes, women's paid employment is negatively correlated with the occupational position of their husbands. In liberal welfare state regimes, no impact of husbands' resources on their wives' labour force participation could be detected. In the social democratic welfare state regime and generally in former socialist countries, husbands' resources have a positive effect on their wives' employment so that occupational resources cumulate in dual earner families.
