Pavement Management Systems (PMS) for Local Government P. J. Mulholland, 1989 Pavement Management System Development W. Ronald Hudson, Ralph C. G. Haas, R. Daryl Pedigo, 1979 A Pavement Management System for Cheyenne, Wyoming Pavement Management Systems, 1985 An Advanced Course in Pavement Management Systems United States. Federal Highway Administration, 1992 Pavement Management Systems on a Local Level Cristian A. Vasquez, 2011 Roads are one of the most valuable infrastructure assets within a community Proper maintenance of the roadway network can promote the prosperity of a community In recent times maintenance has become much more difficult

with the price of asphalt increasing drastically and city budgets contracting due to the economic downturn. With these conditions, the proper management of an agency's street network is necessary. The use of pavement management systems provides the help needed in the preservation of the street network. The use of pavement management systems provides significant benefits such as identification of the most cost effective pavement treatment actions and accurate predictions of pavement deterioration. The research objectives are to examine and explain how local agencies benefit by using an adequate pavement management system and to develop a pavement prediction model appropriate for use in local agencies. This report provides a comparison of three different Pavement Management Systems: TAMS (Transportation Asset Management System), a Pavement Management System (PMS) developed by Utah, the LTAP (Local Technical Assistance Program) PMS developed by the Alabama DOT for use in cities and counties, and Micro PAVER, a widely used commercial PMS. Their unique characteristics and individual strengths and weaknesses are discussed so that potential users of PMS can better decide what fits best their agencies' needs. Then TAMS is explained in detail as an example of pavement management system and a case study of its application in Tooele city, Utah. Then an economic analysis of no pavement management, a partial pavement management system, and a full pavement management system is provided. The full Pavement Management System showed a savings of about 10%.

Pavement Management Practices Dale E. Peterson, National Research Council (U.S.). Transportation Research Board, 1987. This synthesis will be of interest to pavement designers, maintenance engineers, and others responsible for the management of highway pavements. Information is presented on pavement management systems, the established documented procedures used to treat all activities involved in providing and sustaining pavements in an acceptable condition. As highway agencies focus more attention on maintenance and rehabilitation of highway networks, the use of some form of a pavement management system becomes increasingly important. This report of the Transportation Research Board describes the features, applicability, and use of a pavement management system and recommends five general steps for implementing a new pavement management system or improving an existing system. Pavement Management Systems, 1993.

Pavement Management Methodologies to Select Projects and Recommend Preservation Treatments Kathryn A. Zimmerman, 1995. This synthesis will be of interest to highway administrators, pavement management system (PMS) maintenance and computer engineers, and technologists involved with data collection and computer programming for the purposes of a PMS. This synthesis describes the state of the practice with respect to pavement management methodologies to select projects and recommend preservation treatments. This report of the Transportation Research Board also describes the predominant pavement management methodologies being used by U.S. state and Canadian provincial transportation agencies, provides a general description of each methodology, and summarizes the requirements, benefits, hindrances, and constraints associated with each. It includes a review of domestic literature and a survey of current practices in North America. In addition, case studies are included to illustrate the use of these methodologies within transportation agencies. Operational and soon to be implemented technologies are also discussed and an extensive bibliography is provided for further reference
