eventually accepts his uncle's offer. However, before the transaction can be completed, the squire is killed in a hunting accident and his nephew comes into full possession of the property and its large income. Now safe from his creditors, the new squire is nevertheless harassed by Polly Neefit's father, who threatens him with legal action and embarrassing publicity if he does not continue seeking his daughter's hand. The matter is eventually resolved by Polly, who accepts the oft-repeated proposals of Ontario Moggs, son of a prosperous bootmaker, and induces her father to consent to the marriage despite his preference for the squire. In the meantime, Ralph the squire has proposed to and been rejected by Mary Bonner, the beautiful niece and ward of Sir Thomas Underwood. Soon after this, she accepts an offer of marriage from the illegitimate Ralph. The novel also describes a Parliamentary election in the fictional borough of Percycross, in which Sir Thomas, a Conservative, and Moggs, a Radical, are two of the four candidates for the two available seats. Both are eager that the election be conducted fairly and honestly. The other two candidates, one a Conservative and one a Liberal, are the incumbents; they see nothing wrong with the buying and selling of votes that has been traditional at Percycross. Sir Thomas and his fellow Conservative win the election, but it is annulled on petition, and the borough is disfranchised by Parliament because of its pervasive corruption.

CHAPTER X. IN MR NEEFIT'S DISTURBED ANTHEMION. THE morning following Mrs Brownlow's little tea party Ralph Newton was bound by appointment to call upon Sir Thomas. But before he started on that duty a certain friend of his called upon him. This friend was Mr Neefit. But before the necessary account of Mr Neefit's mission is given the reader must be made acquainted with a few circumstances as they had occurred at Hendon. It will be remembered perhaps that on the Sunday evening the two rivals left the cottage at the same moment, one taking the road to the right and the other that to the left, so that bloodshed for that occasion at least was prevented. Neefit said his wife to him when they were alone together, "you'll be getting yourself into trouble. You be blowed," said Neefit. He was very angry with his wife and was considering what steps he would take to maintain his proper marital and parental authority. He was not going to give way to the weaker vessel in a matter of such paramount importance as to be made a fool of in his own family. He was quite sure of this while the strength of the port wine still stood to him, and though he was somewhat more troubled in spirit when his wife began to bully him, on the next morning he still had valour enough to say that Ontario Moggs also might be blowed. On the Monday when he returned home and asked for Polly he found that Polly was out walking. Mrs Neefit did not at once tell him that Moggs was walking with her, but such was the fact. Just at five o'clock Moggs had presented himself at the cottage, knowing very well, sly dog that he was, the breeches maker's hour of return, which took place always precisely at four minutes past six, and boldly demanded an interview with Polly.
