Francaviglia, 2005-03-07 The Great Basin was the last region of continental North America to be explored and mapped and it remained largely a mystery to Euro Americans until well into the nineteenth century In Mapping and Imagination in the Great Basin geographer historian Richard Francaviglia shows how the Great Basin gradually emerged from its cartographic silence as terra incognita and how this fascinating process both paralleled the development of the sciences of surveying geology hydrology and cartography and reflected the changing geopolitical aspirations of the European colonial powers and the United States Francaviglia's interdisciplinary account of the mapping of the Great Basin combines a chronicle of the exploration of the region with a history of the art and science of cartography and of the political economic and cultural contexts in which maps are created It also offers a compelling wide ranging discussion that combines a description of the daunting physical realities of the Great Basin with a cogent examination of the ways humans from early Native Americans to nineteenth century surveyors to twentieth century highway and air travelers have understood defined and organized this space psychologically and through the medium of maps Mapping and Imagination in the Great Basin continues Francaviglia's insightful richly nuanced meditation on the Great Basin landscape that began in Believing in Place
