Figure 1a is a photograph of the 1000000th iteration of the random walk. The random walk is a sequence of points in the plane, starting at the origin and moving in a random direction at each step. The points are connected by lines, forming a path that resembles a random walk. The path is shown in a 2D plot with axes ranging from -10 to 10 on both the x and y axes. The path is a single line connecting the points, showing a clear random walk pattern.
