Figure 1a is a photograph of the 1000000th iteration of the random walk. The random walk is a sequence of points in the plane, starting at the origin and moving in a random direction at each step. The points are connected by lines, forming a path that fills the plane. The path is a fractal, with a Hausdorff dimension of 2. The path is a random walk, and the points are the vertices of the path. The path is a random walk, and the points are the vertices of the path.
