From the World Health Organization, Geneva, Switzerland

SYNOPSIS A five-year follow-up of the patients initially included in the International Pilot Study of Schizophrenia was conducted in eight of the nine centres. Adequate information was obtained for 807 patients, representing 76% of the initial cohort. Clinical and social outcomes were significantly better for patients in Agra and Ibadan than for those in the centres in developed countries. In Cali, only social outcome was significantly better.

INTRODUCTION

The International Pilot Study of Schizophrenia (IPSS) is a transcultural psychiatric investigation of 1202 patients in nine countries - Colombia, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, India, Nigeria, China, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom and the United States of America.

The IPSS sample was recruited from successive admissions or referrals to psychiatric facilities in the different centres and thus was not necessarily representative of the wider population of schizophrenic and other psychiatric patients in the community.

The first publication related to this study (WHO, 1973) presented a detailed account of the origins of the study as well as description of the place of the IPSS in the World Health Organization's long-term programme in epidemiological and social psychiatry. The results of a two-year follow-up of the original cohort of patients were published in a second volume (WHO, 1979). The initial phase of the study, which occupied the period between April 1968 and September 1969, demonstrated the feasibility of a large-scale international collaborative study, which required the field workers involved to apply standardized interviews in eight different languages. Despite this linguistic diversity, satisfactory inter-rater reliability was achieved for the schedules used. It was discovered that patients with characteristic patterns of signs and symptoms, closely corresponding to descriptions of schizophrenia in the most widely used textbooks, were found in each of the settings. In seven of the nine centres, the diagnostic term schizophrenia was applied by the research psychiatrists to a group of patients whose clinical characteristics were very similar across these centres. In the two remaining centres, Washington and Moscow, the psychiatrists included broader clinical groupings under the rubric of schizophrenia. This was confirmed by the use of a computer program, CATEGO (Wing et al. 1974), which functioned as a reference classification with which to compare the diagnostic practices in each of the centres. Agreement between the centres on a core group of patients diagnosed as schizophrenia was sufficient to justify comparison of the outcome of patients in the various centres.

A two-year follow-up study of the original cohort was successfully completed although the proportion of patients with complete assessments was rather low in some of the centres, notably London and Ibadan. In London there were difficulties due to insufficient staff, while in Ibadan problems arose in tracing rural patients. Of the 1202 patients given an initial examination, it was possible to obtain sufficient information about 77% to include them in the basic follow-
