Exiled Scholars in Western Academia: Refugees or Intellectuals? Alfred Babo, Sayed Hassan Akhlaq, 2025-04-09 This volume focuses on the experiences of refugee scholars in Western academia through first hand narratives that move between dominant humanitarianism and the academic establishment It provides an intellectual view of this humanitarian industry from a refugee perspective alongside stories of the refugee scholars contribution to the production of knowledge in the West Contributors discuss their unique experiences and reflect on the changing nature of knowledge production transfer and exchange in a world increasingly affected by forced migration Such reflections are not new However in this volume they explore how personal life difficulties and or successes mixed with emotional distress and cultural adjustments could be framed into a scholarly analysis of academia in exile In today s globalized world the term refugee often evokes both sympathy and criticism leaving refugee scholars in Western universities to ponder the ambivalent nature of their identity This duality of identity creates new opportunities for rethinking concepts such as humanitarianism indigenization asylum diversity equity and integration scholar activism and the transnational production of knowledge in the
