Board of Education,1908 Patriotic Pluralism Jeffrey Mirel,2010-04-30 In this book leading historian of education Jeffrey E Mirel retells a story we think we know in which public schools forced a draconian Americanization on the great waves of immigration of a century ago Ranging from the 1890s through the World War II years Mirel argues that Americanization was a far more nuanced and negotiated process from the start much shaped by immigrants themselves Drawing from detailed descriptions of Americanization programs for both schoolchildren and adults in three cities Chicago Cleveland and Detroit and from extensive analysis of foreign language newspapers Mirel shows how immigrants confronted different kinds of Americanization When native born citizens contemptuously tried to force them to forsake their home religions languages or histories immigrants pushed back strongly While they passionately embraced key aspects of Americanization the English language American history democratic political ideas and citizenship they also found in American democracy a defense of their cultural differences In seeing no conflict between their sense of themselves as Italians or Germans or Poles and Americans they helped to create a new and inclusive vision of this country Mirel vividly retells the epic story of one of the great achievements of American education which has profound implications for the Americanization of immigrants today Annual Report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction ,1893 Annual Report of the Department of the Interior United States. Department of Agriculture,1919 Resources in Education ,1993 American Catholic Schools in the Twentieth Century Ann Marie Ryan,2022-02-21 This book examines how Catholic educators grappled with public educational policies and reforms like standardization and accreditation educational measurement and testing and federal funding for schools during the early to mid twentieth century These issues elicited an array of reactions including resistance cooperation and co optation American Catholics had established one of the largest private educational organizations in the United States by the twentieth century. It rivaled only that of the public school system. At mid-century, Catholic schools enrolled some 12 percent of the American school-age population, and their enrollments grew in number through the 1960s. The Catholic Church's lobbying arm, the National Catholic Welfare Conference (NCWC), used its well-earned stature to push for federal funds for students attending their schools. The NCWC succeeded in securing funds with the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 for students needing special education services and students living in poverty attending Catholic schools. This signified a major shift in American education policy. Despite this radical change, Catholic schools lost significant enrollment over the next several decades to public, private, and newly minted public charter schools. Catholic schools faced an increasingly competitive landscape in an ever-expanding school choice environment that they helped create. Annual Report Chicago (Ill.). Board of Education, 1874
