Åfarli, Brit Maehlum, 2014-04-16 The aim of this book is to investigate and attain new insights on how and to what extent the wider sociolinguistic context of language use and contact impinges on formal grammatical structures The papers contained in the book approach this important problem from various points of view by focusing on language evolution and change on multilingualism language mixing and dialect variation on spoken language and on creole languages Given the theoretical perspectives methodological focus and analyses the book will be of interest to theoretical linguists as well as sociolinguists from undergraduate students to researchers

Resources in Education, 1995 Lexical Tone Perception in Infants and Young Children: Empirical studies and theoretical perspectives Leher Singh, Denis Burnham, Jessica Hay, Liquan Liu, Karen Mattock, 2019-11-20 In psycholinguistic research there has traditionally been a strong emphasis on understanding how particular language types of

are processed and learned. In particular Romance and Germanic languages e.g. English, French, German have until recently received more attention than other types such as Chinese languages. This has led to selective emphasis on the phonological building blocks of European languages: consonants and vowels, to the exclusion of lexical tones which like consonants and vowels determine lexical meaning but unlike consonants and vowels are based on pitch variations. Lexical tone is pervasive: it is used in at least half of the world languages (Maddieson 2013) e.g. most Asian and some African, Central American and European languages. This Research Topic brings together a collection of recent empirical research on the processing and representation of lexical tones across the lifespan with an emphasis on advancing knowledge on how tone systems are acquired. The articles focus on various aspects of tone: early perception of tones, influences of tone on word learning, the acquisition of new tone systems and production of tones. One set of articles report on tone perception at the earliest stage of development in infants learning either tone or non-tone languages. Tsao and Chen et al. demonstrate that infants' sensitivity to Mandarin lexical tones as well as pitch improves over the first year of life in native and non-native learners, in contrast to traditional accounts of perceptual narrowing for consonants and vowels. Gtz et al. report a different pattern of perception for Cantonese tones and further demonstrate influences of methodological approaches on infants' tone sensitivity. Fan et al. demonstrate that sensitivity to less well studied properties of tone languages such as neutral tone may develop after the first year of life. Cheng and Lee ask a similar question in an electrophysiological study and report effects of stimulus salience on infants' neural response to native tones. In a complementary set of studies focused on tone sensitivity in word learning, Burnham et al. demonstrate that infants bind tones to newly learned words if they are learning a tone language either monolingually or bilingually, although it was also found that object-word binding was influenced by the properties of individual tones. Liu and Kager chart a developmental trajectory over the second year of life in which infants narrow in their interpretation of non-native tones. Choi et al. investigate how learning a tone language can influence uptake of other suprasegmental properties of language such as stress and demonstrate that native tone sensitivity in children can facilitate stress sensitivity when learning a stress-based language. Finally, two studies focus on sensitivity to pitch in a subclass of tone languages: pitch accent languages. In a study on Japanese children's abilities to recognise words they know, Ota et al. demonstrate a limited sensitivity to native pitch contrasts in toddlers. In contrast, Ramackers et al. demonstrate comparatively strong sensitivity to pitch in native and non-native speakers of a different pitch accent system, Limburgish, when learning new words. Several studies focus on learning new tone systems. In a training study with school-aged children, Kasisopa et al. demonstrate that tone language experience increases children's abilities to learn new tone contrasts. Poltrock et al. demonstrate similar advantages of tone experience in learning new tone systems in adults. And in an electrophysiological study, Liu et al. demonstrate order effects in adults' neural responses to new tones, discussing implications for learning tone languages as an adult. Finally, Hannah et al. demonstrate that extralinguistic cues such as facial expression can support adults learning of new tone systems In three studies investigating tone production Rattansone et al report the results of a study demonstrating kindergartners asynchronous mastery of tones delayed acquisition of tone sandhi forms relative to base forms In a study interrogating a corpus of adult tone production Han et al demonstrate that mothers produce tones in a distinct manner when speaking to infants tone differences are emphasised more when speaking to infants than to adults Combining perception and production of tones Wong et al report asynchronous development of tone perception and tone production in children The Research Topic also includes a series of Opinion pieces and Commentaries addressing the broader relevance of tone and pitch to the study of language acquisition Curtin and Werker discuss ways in which tone can be integrated into their model of infant language development PRIMIR Best discusses the phonological status of lexical tones and considers how recent empirical research on tone perception bears on this question Kager focuses on how language learners distinguish lexical tones from other sources of pitch variation e g affective and pragmatic that also inform language comprehension Finally Antoniou and Chin unite evidence of tone sensitivity from children and adults and discuss how these areas of research can be mutually informative Psycholinguistic studies of lexical tone acquisition have burgeoned over the past 13 years This collection of empirical studies and opinion pieces provides a state of the art panoply of the psycholinguistic study of lexical tones and demonstrate its coming of age The articles in this Research Topic will help address the hitherto Eurocentric non tone language research emphasis and will contribute to an expanding narrative of speech perception speech production and language acquisition that includes all of the world s languages Importantly these studies underline the scientific promise of drawing from tone languages in psycholinguistic research the research questions raised by lexical tone are unique and distinct from those typically applied to more widely studied languages and populations The comprehensive study of language acquisition can only benefit from this expanded focus

The Grammar of Multilingualism Artemis Alexiadou, Terje Lohndal, 2016-10-31 This volume investigates the nature of grammatical representations in speakers who master multiple languages Since the early days of modern formal approaches to grammar most work has been based on the language of monolingual humans Less work has been conducted based on data from speakers who possess more than one language Although important insights have been gained from a monolingual focus there is every reason to believe that bi and multilingual data can inform linguistic theory A lot of ongoing work demonstrates that this is indeed the case and the current volume contributes to this growing literature Thus the research topic addresses a number of questions relating to grammatical structures in multilingual speakers as well as the methodological issues that arise in the context of studying such speakers A better understanding of the grammatical sides of multilingualism is crucial for understanding the human language capacity and in turn for offering better advice to the public concerning issues of language choice for multilingual children and adults education and language deficits in multilingual individuals

Second Language Acquisition and Linguistic Variation Robert Bayley, Dennis Richard Preston, 1996-01-01 This volume corrects the relative neglect in Second

Language Acquisition studies of the quantitative study of language variation and provides insights into such issues as language transfer acquisition through exposure language universals learner s age and so forth These studies bolster the idea that a full account of SLA development and hence a theory of SLA must be built on not only detailed accounts of interlanguage data but also on a wide appeal to factors which govern the psycholinguistic bases of SLA An important addition to the volume is a comprehensive guide to both the DOS and Macintosh versions of the VARBRUL statistical program used by variationists

Developmental, Modal, and Pathological Variation — Linguistic and Cognitive Profiles for Speakers of Linguistically Proximal Languages and Varieties Kleanthes K. Grohmann, Maria Kambanaros, Evelina Leivada, 2018-11-08 One significant area of research in the multifaceted field of bilingualism over the past two decades has been the demonstration validation and account of the so called bilingual advantage This refers to the hypothesis that bilingual speakers have advanced abilities in executive functions and other domains of human cognition Such cognitive benefits of bilingualism have an impact on the processing mechanisms active during language acquisition in a way that results in language variation Within bilingual populations the notion of language proximity or linguistic distance is also of key importance for deriving variation In addition sociolinguistic factors can invest the process of language development and its outcome with an additional layer of complexity such as schooling language dominance competing motivations or the emergence of mesolectal varieties which blur the boundaries of grammatical variants This is particularly relevant for diglossic speech communities bilectal bidialectal or bivarietal speakers The defined goal of the present Research Topic is to address whether the bilingual advantage extends to such speakers as well Thus Linguistic and Cognitive Profiles for Speakers of Linguistically Proximal Languages and Varieties become an important matter within Developmental Modal and Pathological Variation

Cross-linguistic Aspects of Processability Theory Manfred Pienemann, 2005-01-01 Seven years ago Manfred Pienemann proposed a novel psycholinguistic theory of language development Processability Theory PT This volume examines the typological plausibility of PT Focusing on the acquisition of Arabic Chinese and Japanese the authors demonstrate the capacity of PT to make detailed and verifiable predictions about the developmental schedule for each language This cross linguistic perspective is also applied to the study of L1 transfer by comparing the impact of processability and typological proximity The typological perspective is extended by including a comparison of different types of language acquisition The architecture of PT is expanded by the addition of a second set of principles that contributes to the formal modeling of levels of processability namely the mapping of argument structure onto functional structure in lexical mapping theory This step yields the inclusion of a range of additional phenomena in the processability hierarchy thus widening the scope of PT     A Linguistic Guide to English Proficiency Testing in Schools
