Newfoundland Journey Into A Lost Nation:

Newfoundland Michael Crummey, 2004 Greg Locke had been away from Newfoundland for years working as a photojournalist in Canada the United States and in many of the world's most troubled regions when he decided to go home and stay The photographs in Newfoundland were taken over a period of more than a decade They chronicle the passage of Canada's easternmost province from a time when cod were still plentiful and the fishery shaped the lives of most of the island's inhabitants to the present when a vibrant economy propelled by oil and mineral development is recasting the island's identity in a new mould What Locke's photographs reveal is at once forward looking and nostalgic beautiful and harsh Above all his Newfoundland is populated by survivors a people who are resourceful funny resilient and strong Poet and novelist Michael Crummey draws upon deep seated memories of his own and of his father's experience to evoke passing traditions and a disappearing way of life But just as Locke's photographs reveal the emergence of a new more urban and cosmopolitan Newfoundland so does Crummey's writing emphasize the continuing sense of belonging and the determination to persevere that are characteristic of his compatriots He writes admiringly of a culture deep enough to accommodate a world of influences without surrendering what makes it unmistakably of this place Something alive and leaning towards the future This book embodies both a vision and a voice of rare power

Speaking in the Past Tense Herb Wyile, 2009-10-22 Speaking in the Past Tense participates in an expanding critical dialogue on the writing of historical fiction providing a series of reflections on the process from the perspective of those souls intrepid enough to step onto what is practically by definition contested territory Herb Wyile from the Introduction The extermination of the Beothuk the exploration of the Arctic the experiences of soldiers in the trenches during World War I the foibles of Canada's longest serving prime minister the Ojibway sniper who is credited with 378 wartime kills these are just some of the people and events discussed in these candid and wide ranging interviews with eleven authors whose novels are based on events in Canadian history These sometimes startling conversations take the reader behind the scenes of the novels and into the minds of their authors Through them we explore the writers motives for writing the challenges they faced in gathering information and presenting it in fictional form the sometimes hostile reaction they faced after publication and perhaps most interestingly the stories that didn't make it into their novels Speaking in the Past Tense provides fascinating insights into the construction of national historical narratives and myths both those familiar to us and those that are still being written

The Newfoundland Diaspora Jennifer Bowering Delisle, 2013-06-01 Out migration driven by high unemployment and a floundering economy has been a defining aspect of Newfoundland society for well over a century and it reached new heights with the cod moratorium in 1992 This Newfoundland diaspora has had a profound impact on the province's literature Many writers and scholars have referred to Newfoundland out migration as a diaspora but few have examined the theoretical implications of applying this contested term to a predominantly inter provincial movement of mainly white economically motivated migrants The Newfoundland

Diaspora argues that diaspora helpfully references the painful displacement of a group whose members continue to identify with each other and with the homeland It examines important literary works of the Newfoundland diaspora including the poetry of E J Pratt the drama of David French the fiction of Donna Morrissey and Wayne Johnston and the memoirs of David Macfarlane These works are the sites of a broad inquiry into the theoretical flashpoints of affect diasporic authenticity nationalism race and ethnicity The literature of the Newfoundland diaspora both contributes to and responds to critical movements in Canadian literature and culture querying the place of regional national and ethnic affiliations in a literature drawn along the borders of the nation state This diaspora plays a part in defining Canada even as it looks beyond the borders of Canada as a literary community Ten Canadian Writers in Context Marie Carrière, Curtis Gillespie, Jason

Purcell, 2016-11-04 Ten years ten authors ten critics The Canadian Literature Centre Centre de littérature canadienne reaches into its ten year archive of Brown Bag Lunch readings to sample some of the most diverse and powerful voices in contemporary Canadian literature This anthology offers readers samples from some of Canada's most exciting writers of fiction nonfiction and poetry Each selection is introduced by a brief essay serving as a point of entry into the writer's work From the east coast of Newfoundland to Kitimaat territory on British Columbia's central coast there is a story for everyone from everywhere True to Canada's multilingual and multicultural heritage these ten writers come from diverse ethnicities and backgrounds and work in multiple languages including English French and Cree Ying Chen essay by Julie Rodgers Lynn Coady essay by Ma t Snauwaert Michael Crummey essay by Jennifer Bowering Delisle Caterina Edwards essay by Joseph Pivato Marina Endicott essay by Daniel Laforest Lawrence Hill essay by Winfried Siemerling Alice Major essay by Don Perkins Eden Robinson essay by Kit Dobson Gregory Scofield essay by Angela Van Essen Kim Th y essay by Pamela V Sing

Unsettled Remains Cynthia Sugars, Gerry Turcotte, 2010-08-27 Unsettled Remains Canadian Literature and the Postcolonial Gothic examines how Canadian writers have combined a postcolonial awareness with gothic metaphors of monstrosity and haunting in their response to Canadian history The essays gathered here range from treatments of early postcolonial gothic expression in Canadian literature to attempts to define a Canadian postcolonial gothic mode Many of these texts wrestle with Canada's colonial past and with the voices and histories that were repressed in the push for national consolidation but emerge now as uncanny reminders of that contentious history The haunting effect can be unsettling and enabling at the same time In recent years many Canadian authors have turned to the gothic to challenge dominant literary political and social narratives In Canadian literature the postcolonial gothic has been put to multiple uses above all to figure experiences of ambivalence that have emerged from a colonial context and persisted into the present As these essays demonstrate formulations of a Canadian postcolonial gothic differ radically from one another depending on the social and cultural positioning of who is positing it Given the preponderance in colonial discourse of accounts that demonize otherness it is not surprising that many minority writers have avoided gothic metaphors In recent years however minority authors have shown an interest in the gothic signalling an emerging critical discourse This spectral turn sees minority writers reversing long standing characterizations of their identity as monstrous or invisible in order to show their connections to and disconnection from stories of the nation

Most of What Follows is True Michael Crummey, 2019-04-02 The prizewinning author of The Innocents examines the relationships among fact fiction fictionalization and appropriation in this thought provoking work In all creative writing the question of what is true and what is real are two very different considerations Figuring out how to dance between them is a murky business In Most of What Follows Is True Michael Crummey examines the complex relationship between fact and fiction between the real world and the stories we tell to explain it Drawing on his own experience appropriating historical characters to fictional ends he brings forward important questions about how writers use history and real life figures to animate fictional stories Is there a limit to the liberties a writer can take Is there a point at which a fictionalized history becomes a false history What responsibilities do writers have to their readers and to the historical and cultural materials they exploit as sources Crummey offers thoughtful witty views on the deep and timely conversation around appropriation

Anne of Tim Hortons Herb Wyile, 2011-04-25 Anne of Tim Hortons Globalization and the Reshaping of Atlantic Canadian Literature is a study of the work of over twenty contemporary Atlantic Canadian writers that counters the widespread impression of Atlantic Canada as a quaint and backward place By examining their treatment of work culture and history author Herb Wyile highlights how these writers resist the image of Atlantic Canadians as improvident and regressive if charming folk After an introduction that examines the current place of the region within the Canadian federation and the broader context of economic globalization Anne of Tim Hortons explores how Atlantic Canadian writers present a picture of the region that is much more complex and less quaint than the stereotypes through which it is typically viewed Through the works of authors such as Michael Winter Lisa Moore George Elliott Clarke Rita Joe Frank Barry Alistair MacLeod and Bernice Morgan among others the book looks at the changing and increasingly corporate nature of work the cultural diversification and subversive self consciousness of Atlantic Canadian literature and Atlantic Canadian writers often revisionist approach to the region's history What these writers are engaged in the book contends is a kind of collective readjustment of the image of the region Rather than a marginal place stranded outside of time Atlantic Canada in these works is very much caught up in contemporary economic political and cultural developments particularly the broad sweep of economic globalization
